

Spaniards to the whole eastern side of America, north of the Mexican Gulf, 53. Expeditions through it under Narvaez, 55, and Soto, 63. Ceded to the United States, 316.

Fonte, Admiral, supposed voyage, in the North Pacific, by a person so named, 82.

Forsyth, John, secretary of state of the United States, instructions respecting the meaning of the convention with Russia, 362. Endeavors to procure information respecting the north-west coast, 375.

Fox, Charles J., his speech in Parliament on the Nootka convention, 212.

Fremont, John C., captain in the army of the United States exploring expedition to Oregon and California, 386.

Fuca, Juan de, voyage in the North Pacific, and supposed discovery of a new passage leading to the Atlantic, 85, 407.

Fuca, Strait of, described, 22. Discovered by Juan de Fuca, 85. Search for it by Heceta, 119. By Cook, 150. Found by Berkeley, 171. Rediscovery claimed by Meares, 175. Entered by Gray, 199, 234. Kendrick passes through it, 200, 217. Surveyed by Vancouver, and Galiano, and Valdes, 238.

Furs and fur trade, general account, 411. See Russian American Company, Hudson's Bay Company, and North-West Company.

G

Gallatin, Albert, minister plenipotentiary of the United States at London; negotiations at London, 314, 344. Counter statement respecting the claims of the United States, presented by him to British commissioners, 347, 455.

Gali, Francisco, his voyage, 66.

Galiano and Valdes, their voyage through the Strait of Fuca, 240. Journal published by the Spanish government; Introduction to that Journal reviewed, 241.

Gray, Robert, first voyage to the North Pacific, in command of the trading sloop Washington, from Boston, 180. Sees an opening supposed to be the mouth of the Columbia River, 181. First examines the east coast of Washington's or Queen Charlotte's Island, 199. Enters the Strait of Fuca, 200. Returns to Boston in the ship Columbia, 200. Second voyage to the North Pacific, in the Columbia, 226, 229. Meets Vancouver near the entrance of the Strait of Fuca, and makes known his discovery of the mouth of a great river, 233. Discovers Bulfinch's Harbor, 235. Enters the great river, which he names the Columbia, 236. Makes known his discovery to the Spanish commandant at Nootka, 237. Letter of Gray and Ingraham to the Spanish commandant, respecting the occurrences at Nootka in 1789, 242, 413. Returns to the United States, 237.

Great Britain obtains Canada, Florida, and East Louisiana, by the treaty of Paris, 103.

H

Harmon, D. W., important evidence afforded by him respecting the first trading posts established by the British west of the Rocky Mountains, 291.

Hawaii. See Owyhee.

Hearne, Samuel, discoveries in the territory west of Hudson's Bay, 145. Reaches the Arctic Sea, at the mouth of Coppermine River, 146.

Heceta, Bruno, voyage along the north-west coast of America, in 1775, 117. Discovers a river, called by him Rio de San Roque, now known as the Columbia, 120.

Howel's account of the negotiation at Nootka, between Vancouver and Quadra, 245.

Hudson, Henry, discovers Hudson's Bay, 24. Hudson's Bay Company established by charter, 98. Efforts to discover a north-west passage, 141. Disputes with the North-West Company, 260, 324. Union of these two companies, 326. Receives a grant of exclusive trade in the Indian territories, 326. General view of its system and establishments, 397. Papers relating to it, 465.

Hudson's Strait, probably the same called by the Portuguese the Strait of Anian, 45.

Hunt, Wilson P., chief agent of the Pacific Fur Company, 298. His negotiations with Governor Baranof at Sitka, 302.

I

Ingraham, Joseph, mate of the ship Columbia, in her first voyage from Boston to the north-west coast, 180. Returns to the Pacific as master of the brig Hope, and discovers the Washington or North Marquesas Islands, 226. At the Sandwich Islands, 227. At Queen Charlotte's Island, 227. At Macao, where he meets Marchand, and communicates his discovery of the Washington Islands, the priority of which is admitted by Marchand and Fleury, 228. At Nootka, where he writes a letter, signed by himself and Gray, respecting the proceedings at that place in 1789, 242. Copy of that letter, 414. Unfair synopsis of it by Vancouver, 244. His journal, 231. His death, 237.

J

Jesuits undertake the reduction of California, 96. Their system and establishments, 97. Their History of California, 98. Expelled from the Spanish dominions, 106. Results of their labors in California, 107.

Jesup, Thomas S., quartermaster-general of the United States; report on the best means of occupying Oregon, 336. Effect of that report on the negotiations in Europe, 337.

Jewitt, J. R., his captivity among the Indians at Nootka, 268.