Defendant Wins.

Judge Morgan yesterday heard the suit of John O'Neil against John A. Roiston without a jury. The plaintiff is an hotel-keeper and the defendant the proprietor of a laundry. O'Neil was the landlord of premises at 187 and 189 Parliament-street leased by Roiston, and he claimed the place was damaged to the extent of $200 by Roiston's occupation. The Evangelical Churchman says, editorially: The conflict in connection with the rectory of St. James', Toronto, has ended in the appointment of the Rev. Provost. Welch. This is to be deeply deplored, both because it has only been effected after the unanimous choice of the representatives of the congregation had been set aside and because it runs so manifestly contrary to the old traditions of St. James'. Provost Welch is a most estimable Christian gentle man, but he is distinctly a representative of the Neo-Anglican School of Theology in its recent developments as expounded in the writings of Gore, Mason, Sadler and other exponents of Oxford Divinity.
