Dodson as a Bridge Whist Player.

E. Dodson, the character actor who is just now touring in a comedy called "The House Next Door," is an expert bridge player, and an authority on the game. He plays with many well known New York millionaires, among them Charles M. Schwab, J. among them Charles M. Schwab, J. Pierpont Morgan and dozens of other men whose combined wealth runs up into a stupendous aggregate. By the common verdict of bridge players in the States he is acknowledged to be the greatest player in America.

"Bridge is the greatest card game in the world," says Mr. Dodson. "The reason is that it combines the skill necessary in whist with the element of gambling that makes poker fascinating."

When in New York Mr. Dodson's When in New York Mr. Dodson's bridge partner is usually Charles M. Schwab. Not long since Mr. Schwab, who is devoted to the game and a very good player, was challenged by two well known men in Wall-street, both well known men in Wall-street, both

"We will play you and a partner for $10 a point and settle this ques-tion of supremacy," was the challenge. Mr. Schwab promptly accepted and named Mr. Dodson as his partner. The game among the millionaires was for till a point, but the actor limited his winnings or losses to ten cents a point. The game was won by Mr. Schwab and Mr. Dodson. The steel magnate insisted upon drawing a cheque for half of his winnings, but Mr. Dodson retised to take the money.

Many Scho'ars Rush Thru Wall of Flame, But Others Turn Back -Three Injured.

The much-boasted fire drill of Toronto school children met with only parblaze which broke out in the front hall of the St. Clair-avenue school at 9.25 yesterday morning. Breaking out toru a cold air flue by reason of a defect in the hot air furnace piping, the fire threw a roaring blaze across the path who sought exit by the front door.

Three of five who jumped or were lowered from a side window on the first floor were slightly injured, while all but 15, led by Miss Stanbury, their plucky teacher, made their way to safety past the roaring blaze, which looked more terrible than it really was. The remaining 10, who turned back, were safe when the flames nad been extinguished by the janitress and several of the larger boys working with the fire-extinguishers provided. The resulting damage was but $250 and the school will be reopened on Monday morning.
