

of France to Charles X and his family, and that which united Belgium to Holland. When the Minister of Foreign Affairs asks, whether we could go to war, in violation of treaties, I answer—Yes, both for France and Belgium; and the King's Government ought to make the same reply. For I take upon me to say that these treaties have not entered into between the King of France and her enemies, but imposed upon France by her enemies, who, by force of foreign bayonets, placed one of their own satellites in the Tuilleries, to traffic with our independence, and convert it to their own profit.—(Cheers from the Left.)

When called upon to explain in this Chamber, and in the presence of Ministers, my notions of the system of non-intervention, I said, that wherever the right of sovereignty was claimed by the people, every intervention in the affairs of that people should be considered as a declaration of war against France. These are the principles we ought to defend, be the consequences what they may. Should we by this fidelity to our principles be forced into a war, we shall, in applying the words of Mr. Calogre, "enter into it with our eyes open and not with our eyes shut." We are supported by 500,000 regular troops, and by 1,000,000 National Guards, of whom the Ministry rendered us no good an account, and I shall now proceed to say, at least, twenty years ago, when the war broke out, he returned to England, to serve—not his country, for that's Ireland—but England, which is a different thing; and she—heaven knows what she did. In the year 1814, the first annunciation of the definitive treaty of peace (and tyranny) was developed to the astonished Milanese, by the arrival of Colonel Moore, who, flinging himself full length at the feet of Madame M., murmured forth, in half-forgotten Irish Italian, eternal vows of indecible constancy. The lady screamed, and exclaimed, "Who are you?" The Colonel cried, "What I don't you know me? I am so and so," &c. &c. &c.; till, at length, the Muses, mounting from rebusiveness to rebusiveness, through the lovers of the intermediate twenty-five years, arrived at last at the recollection of her provero sub-lieutenant. She then said, "Was there ever such virtue?"—(that was her very words,) and, being now a widow, gave him apartments in her palace, re-instated him in all the rights and wrongs, and held him up to the admiring world as a miracle of incontinent fidelity, and the unshaken Adriel of absence.—Moore's Life of Byron.

How to catch a Thief.—Mr. Spencer, wine-merchant, Newton-street, Holborn, having recently lost a considerable quantity of fine Malmsay Madeira from his cellar, suspected that some of his men had a false key; and, in the hope of discovering the delinquent, put a small detonating ball into the lock of the door. The plan was successful, for on Tuesday evening the family were apprised, by a loud report from below, that discovery was at hand, and on proceeding to the cellar found W. M., pale and trembling, with his hand on the key, as if nailed to the door, the effect no doubt of the report of the detonating ball, which his fears misguided into the belief that he was shot.—The prisoner was taken to Bow-street, on Wednesday, and was remanded.

Scottish names in Poland.—It is a circumstance not unworthy of remark, that a great number of persons of Scottish lineage are to be found in Poland. Among the Polish nobility are several names very common in this country, as belonging to our oldest and first families—such as Johnston, Lindsay, Gordon and Middleton. These individuals are in general descended from Scottish adventurers who sought employment in the seventeenth century, in the Russian armies.

A Bold Peasantry.—Does any man tell me, that my frail efforts can be of no service; and that it does not belong to my humble station to meddle with the concerns of a nation? I can tell him, that it is on such individuals as I, that a nation has to rest, both for the hand of support, and the eye of intelligence. The unformed mob may swell a nation's bulk; and the titled, tinsel, courtly throng, may be its feathered ornament; but the number of those, who are elevated enough in life to reason and to reflect, yet low enough to keep clear of the venal contagion of a court—these are a nation's strength.—[Burns, the Ayrshire Ploughman.]
