Factories of That Country Are Manufacturing Shells Without
Profit—Report of Missionary

(Toronto Mail and Empire.)
All the speakers scheduled to speak on "Foreign Missions" at last night's meeting of the Toronto and Kingston Synod of the Presbyterian Church gave the minutes allotted to them to Dr. J. Waters, a medical missionary from India. Dr. Waters furnished interesting descriptions of the consternation of the news of war had on the natives of India, of how they casted notes into gold, which they buried, how the young men hid in the jungle, and of the educational work of the missionaries which brought about a better understanding and a firmer link between India and the homeland. Missionaries were told time and again their place was among the native who had given them their confidence rather than in the war zone, and part of the teachings of the missionaries had given this message to Canadian proficients that there are today in India 200 factories turning out shells without making one cent of profit. One of the greatest aspects we have in India today, said Dr. Waters is the loyalty of the natives to our king and queen, and from India's point of view the greatest possible disaster would happen if England became a republic. What the Presbyterian missionaries feared now was a mass movement such as the Episcopal church had in the Punjab when 85,000 were baptized and 22,000 were turned away. It was up to the church now to prepare for such a movement for the state of keeping baptized natives in ignorance of the Divine truth would be worse than the first. There was a great demand for preachers, medical missionaries, which might be met by the men now at the front, if the Presbyterian Church rose to the situation.

STIRRING UP THE EAST.

Governor Capper of Kansas, returned after a trip to Washington, makes the following significant statement in "Capper's Weekly":
"I told them all that Kansas was making great sacrifices for the war in the right spirit, that it would not spare itself, but that nothing would put more heart in western people and give the west greater confidence in what you are doing here in Washington than to have you put the money-grabbers out of that business. If you demonstrate to the people that this government is terribly in earnest about making this a rich man's war as well as a poor man's fight, the west will back you with an enthusiasm as fervid as a camp meeting. Get the gougers that are moving up the cost of living, draft excess profits and the west will go down to the last ditch with you in this war, if need be, as cheerfully as to a picnic. You can judge yourself what it would mean to the nation to have the people face the war in this temper."
"Everywhere I went in the east I took pains to make it known that the west wishes and expects the government to go the limit in making this a pay-as-you-go war, that it was everlastingly in favor of Senator Johnson's plan of conscripting wealth, that our western men of wealth, as well as the rest of the people, believed the nation should take 80 per cent of the big incomes and all of the war profits except a reasonable return on the capital invested."
"The west believes that our greatest enemies in this war are the enemies at home, the steel profiteers, who are making it impossible for the average farmer to buy machinery, and the horde of others who are stinting the food and fuel supply in more than half the homes of the nation and will bring upon these
