DYING BOY REVIVED

Pulse Stopped Two Hours, Then Beat for Five Before Death.

Stratford, Ont., Aug. 28.—One of the most remarkable cases of suspended animation in the medical history of Canada was revealed when physicians announced that seven-year-old Jack R. Leaney had lived for five hours after his pulse had stopped beating for two hours.

A high stimulant was used when life was apparently extinct. For two hours there was no sign of life. Then the pulse began to beat again, and after five hours, at the end of which the boy had died.

AMERICAN GIRLS HEAD
FOSILES ON LANDRU TOMB

Romantic Visitors Decorate Beard's Graves; Many Tourists Visit Place.

Paris, Aug. 28.—The tomb of Landru, the Bluebeard of Gambais, who was guillotined last year for the murder of several of his wives, is the object of interest of American tourists this summer.

Guides and interpreters who direct tourists from Versailles are always told to halt when the auto-buses approach the cemetery where Landru is buried, and sightseers apparently are as eager to inspect the ground as they are to visit the historic place.

Frequently at the end of the day the tomb is covered with floral wreaths, gifts from romantic American and English girls who see in Landru's career much to admire. Tourist auto-buses now make a regular stop not only at the cemetery but at the prison where he was executed.

The attendants at the Bastille receive large tips for recounting to visitors the last moments of the condemned man.

What Puzzled Him.

A Scotch professor was advocating the advantages of athletic exercises. "The Roman youth," he declared, "used to swim three times across the Tiber before breakfast." Observing a smile on the face of one of his students, the professor demanded: "Why, Mr. McAllister, why do you smile? We shall be glad to share your amusement."

"It was just thinking, sir," the student replied, "weren't the Roman youths puzzled to get their clothes at the end of the swim?"—Edinburgh Scotsman.
