WOULD CRIPPLE TRADE TO CANADA

Opposition to Emergency Tariff Bill is Voiced—Senator Stanley Gives Reason for Belief That it Would be Unwise.

Washington, May 27.—(By Canadian Press)—Vigorous opposition to the emergency tariff bill was voiced in the senate recently by Senator Stanley of Kentucky, one of the democratic leaders on the ground that the ultimate effect of such legislation would be to cripple trade with Canada.

Senator Stanley warned the senate that the passage of the emergency tariff bill would be the beginning of a war of commerce. He put into the record tables showing the enormous totals of the commerce exchanged between the U. S. and Canada in recent years and he held it unwise to pass a law which would curtail this commerce. The senator said that the fear of the slumping of Canadian wheat upon the U. S. market was the only reason yet assigned in Congress for this embargo upon Canadian commerce.

"Canada never has and she never can supply any material portion of her grain on the U. S. market," he said, "and if we did it could not appreciably effect price in this country. The price of wheat in Canada, as in the United States, is necessarily determined by the price of the surplus from each country; this surplus being sold in the same market under practically identical circumstances, it is a matter of small importance whether it is shipped from Montreal or Chicago. In each case, broadly speaking, it must necessarily bring the Liverpool price, less the cost of transportation. From 1910 to 1920 inclusive Canada exported to the United States 88,468,248 bushels of wheat. During this period she also imported from us 50,406,748 bushels of wheat, leaving a net excess for the ten year period of 38,061,500 bushels. In other words during that period Canada 'dumped' on the average, annually into the United States a net excess of about 800,000 bushels. Just how 800,000 bushels, could disturb the general level of the market for seven or eight million bushels of American wheat is inconceivable."

Dwelling on the magnitude of the trade between the two countries and expressing surprise that the scope of trade was not more fully analyzed by the heads of great enterprises, Senator Stanley said: "It is a matter of fact that the fear of a successful contradiction that at this time we are in infinitely greater need of Canadian raw materials than of her markets; that we receive a greater benefit from the things we buy than from those that we sell. The loss of her imports involves a greater injury to American consumers than even the loss of our vast export trade to Canada—approximately at this time, one billion annually."

Mr. Stanley read statistics showing that unfinished products sold by Canada to the United States from 1910 to 1920, inclusive, reached a total value of $253,999,165. "It is a source of some surprise that the great manufacturing and industrial enterprises have not more earnestly and seriously analyzed the commerce between these great countries."

"Manufactured exports from Canada, consisting principally of iron and steel products, machinery and agricultural implements, amounted in 1920 to $24,112,228. "On the other hand we exported to Canada in iron and steel manufactures, rolling mill products, machinery, vehicles, engines and agricultural implements a total of $14,072,568."

"The total of American imports for 1920, according to U. S. Department of Commerce figures, totalled $444,029,014 and our exports for the same period reached a grand total of $800,632,840. "It is claimed that in the face of a sudden emergency the farmer must have instant relief from an inundation of agricultural products from Canada, and that the American consumer is to be impoverished by an excess of cheap foodstuffs for the Dominion. Those who make this claim are ignorant of the nature of this commerce or forget that our exports of agricultural products to Canada vastly exceed our imports."

"In 1920 we shipped to Canada 1,211,881 boxes of oranges valued at $6,006,922, 13,022,568 pounds of prunes, valued at $1,997,914, and 26,881,773 pounds of raisins valued at $4,800,294. Other fresh and dried fruit shipped into Canada in 1920, amounted to $21,065,019. "For the same period we shipped 10,464,881 pounds of cotton and manufactures thereof, valued at $84,686,210, oil cake and oil cake meal valued at $6,006,844, our exports of tobacco were valued at $9,810,986, tobacco imports for the same period amounted to $65,878. We exported onions to the value of $465,836, our imports for the same period being $7,289."

"Our total exports of the articles enumerated above amounted to $85,114,345 and our imports to $72,828, giving the U. S. Agriculturalist a balance of $6,686,489. "Senator Stanley produced a complete summary of the interchange of agricultural products between Canada and the United States from 1910 to 1920. For the year 1920 this summary showed an excess of U. S. exports over imports of $92,967,468. "And now," he said, in conclusion, "this half-baked and so-called emergency bill proposes to relieve the farmers and gardeners of the United States by the instant and utter demolition of this splendid balance in their favor."

GOOD THINGS COMING TO THEATRES OF ST. JOHN.

SURPRISE ACT AT OPERA HOUSE

Three Webber Girls Have Something New for Patrons—Lots of Good Comedy.

The new programme at the Opera House tonight should be highly entertaining, as it has a number of pleasing and novel features. The acts will be as follows: The Three Webber Girls, a comedy in three acts, written by George Rosner, "A Song Cycle of Manhattan"; Sweeney and Rooney, in comedy songs and eccentric dancing, a great mixture of mirth, melody and motion; Jack McGowan, "The Man of the Hour," in a comedy monologue. There will also be another episode of the serial drama "Bride 14" and a Patti Weekly.

Missing Maidens. (Los Angeles Times.) More than 65,000 girls were reported "disappeared" last year in America. Doubtless a majority of them merely answered the call of sex and left the old home and family ties of their own volition. At the same time this is a very heavy toll to be taken from the roll of known and numbered and placed in the column of the missing. Books and plays have been written about "why girls leave home," but there is no break in the outgoing procession. Taking the country as a whole, more than 200 young women disappear from their usual haunts every day of the year. A generation ago the complete disappearance of any girl of good parentage might become a country-wide sensation. Now the bells of the town may absolutely disappear without leaving much more than a ripple. She has either run away with a sweetheart, gone to the big city for a career or sought a job in the year. In either case she has seen fit to sever the family tie and possibly take another name. But there is still an army of lost maidens who are not so favored and have passed forever from the recognition of their kindred. It is to lessen this loss that the reclamation measures are now sought and desired.

Can every mother answer the question: "Where is my daughter?" If the parents were of the old-fashioned kind they would keep tabs on Mary a bit better. Mary isn't wild, she is just a little someone. Directly or indirectly the parents are themselves to blame for at least half of this shocking tale of missing maidens.

PLEBISCITE ON THE HARBOR ON AUGUST 1

(Continued from page 1.) Mr. Bullock said that the question should be decided at once. He said in these days when traffic through the harbor was not up to the average, little hope could be held out for an increase.

Although Hon. Mr. Balleynne said he would do what he could for the port regarding the ferry, the matter was mentioned in the act and he thought that the city could only take as authoritative the words of the act.

He said Quebec had a deficit of $800,000 in interest alone last year and the government had apparently taken care of it. The people there were not worried about it, so he thought that this city should not worry under similar conditions.

He moved the following resolution: "Whereas the question of harbor commission has been before the people for a long time and

Whereas the government under date of July 7, 1919 passed an act relating to the harbor of St. John, wherein they agree to take over all the city's rights, powers, titles and interest in the harbor for the sum of $2,000,000, and appoint a board of commission to administer and have control of the harbor property and privileges; and

Whereas the matter is of importance, and by act of the legislature is subject to a vote of the ratepayers, be it therefore

Resolved that a plebiscite be taken for and on the harbor commission on Monday, August 1, next, and that the mayor prepare a brief statement of the terms upon which the harbor property and privileges are to be conveyed to His Majesty, the King, and be recited.

Commissioner Jones said the harbor had been operating since 1878, but was not being operated to advantage. Between 1915 and 1919 the harbor had been operated at a loss. No profit had been made. He thought that the government should be allowed to operate it. He understood that the government would not make a profit. If the government was to make a profit, it would have to raise the charges, but the commission would not raise the charges, but the city would have to do the same if it retained control.

Commissioner Thornton said he was in favor of the bill as it stood, particularly regarding the ferry rights and the boundaries which extended from the city to the harbor. No profit had been made. BROTHER'S KEEPER OR PUBLIC ENEMY?

(By the Executive Officer of the Massachusetts-Halifax Health Commission.) One constantly hears charges of personal liberty being curtailed when the welfare of neighbors demand restriction of their actions. Usually the complaining individual is the first to insist that his neighbor be restrained under similar conditions. Any community contemplating a modern health programme must resort at times to drastic measures, and times curtailing of liberty. This must be done when the protection of the masses demands that such action be taken. Liberty unrestrained often leads to disease.

Quarantine for the various infectious diseases is a typical form of restriction to which the loud shouting claimant of individual liberty objects if applied to himself, but demands that it be executed of his neighbor. Nuisances detrimental to health must often be handled at the curtailment of individual liberty. The man who pollutes the air of his premises or the premises of his neighbor by maintaining a foul-smelling nuisance must not be allowed the liberty of annoying his neighbor. For civic reasons we often require the removing of an "eye-sore" even though the preacher of the golden rule insists upon the right to do as he pleases with his own property.

The principle enunciated by Blackstone is as applicable today as when enunciated. "Use your own that you will not injure another." It seems strange that people, otherwise worthy, should permit selfish interests or carelessness to keep them from doing their duty as good citizens. No doubt the ignorant or careless citizen often has no real appreciation of the dangers arising from his neglect and carelessness. The good citizen, the worth-while citizen, always co-operates with the health authorities, and sets a good example by trying to comply with any restrictions imposed. He follows the golden rule whether it be to limit the spread of a contagious disease or to abate a nuisance, that might directly or indirectly breed or promote disease.

When the public fully appreciate that the man who maintains a nuisance heap for more than ten days in the vicinity of his dwelling house in a city or town is a public enemy by such conduct, that such person directly contributes toward the death of infants, health authorities will not have so much difficulty in having nuisance removed from the city twice a week, say from the middle of May to the first of November. It is well known that this simple procedure in handling manure will seriously and definitely reduce the population of the community that seriously diseases will be prevented among infants and young children.

Commissioner Thornton said he was in favor of the bill as it stood, particularly regarding the ferry rights and the boundaries which extended from the city to the harbor. No profit had been made. He thought that the government should be allowed to operate it. He understood that the government would not make a profit.
