LOSS IS MILLION

Estimate of Expense of Strike to the Grand Trunk.

THOUSAND MEN LOSE JOBS

Supt. Morley Donaldson in Statement at Ottawa Declares That One-Fifth of the Strikers Will Have to Look Elsewhere For Work—Decrease in Earnings is Nearly Half a Million in Ten-Day Week.

Montreal, Aug. 6.—The Grand Trunk statement issued yesterday of the traffic earnings of the ten-day week which closed July shows a decrease of $45,320 in the earnings. They were $719,307, as against $1,167,357.

This only reveals a corner of the economic warfare caused by the strike. The official statement covers the period from July 22 to July 31, inclusive. The strike began three days before July 22, and lasted two days after the 31st, so that $224,000 may fully be added to the amount of decrease in yesterday's report, making it $679,000. The company's weekly increases for the beginning of the present year to the date of the ordering of the strike averaged over $140,000. This average is entirely obliterated for the 15 days the strike lasted, and makes the aggregate decrease in the company's earnings alone not far short of a million dollars, to say nothing of the direct additional expense involved by the company in engaging new men, in protecting men and property from violence, and in the places and fighting the strike. Something was saved in wages and something in pensions, but the latter will not enrich the ordinary account of the company as the contributions to the pension fund will remain the same.

Ottawa, Aug. 6.—Supt. Morley Donaldson of the Grand Trunk made the following statements after his return from Toronto yesterday.

"The opinion in Toronto and all along the main line is that the strike is an absolute victory for Mr. Hays and the G.T.R. One thousand men will lose their positions over the whole Grand Trunk system as a result of the strike."

"The men who will lose their positions, will do so because they have committed acts of intimidation, or the like. The others will be taken back as rapidly as possible. The men who have come on during the strike, however, will be allowed to stay as long as the wages and pension places are filled by these new men, men who were on strike will just have to be patient and wait."

About twenty of the Ottawa strikers were taken back to work yesterday.

Discovery Caused Stamped.

Winnipeg, Aug. 6.—A number of enquiries by the Grand Trunk in Ontario, Quebec and New England States have been received in Winnipeg as to the correctness of the reported gold discovery north of Hudson Bay Junction.

All information is based upon the statement of A. Vagstad, a Cree Indian, an avowed gambler, who is presently at the Junction his report is regarded as reliable, and practically every male resident of the Junction has gone out to the scene of the alleged discovery to stake claims, and the town is deserted, except by women and children. It is claimed that samples of almost pure gold have been brought into the town.

Chained to the Wall.

Chicago, Aug. 6.—Human agents acting on an anonymous communication from neighbors, forced their way into a dark room in the home of Hugo Lang, and found a six-year-old boy, trembling and cowering, locked to the wall with a heavy chain. The parents were arrested. Neighbors assert that the boy had been punished so much that he crawled on all fours to his parents when they call, and that he has spent a large part of his life chained to the wall in the dark room.

May Divide Diocese.

Winnipeg, Aug. 6.—The Provincial Synod of the Anglican Church for Prince Rupert Land will meet shortly in Prince Albert.

One of the most important problems which will be up will be the question of the division of the Diocese of Calgary, which includes the whole of Alberta, into two bishoprics with two bishops, one at Calgary and the other at Edmonton.

Thought Drowned, Turns Up.

Fort William, Aug. 6.—Reported drowned in the newspapers, and all but given up for dead, J. A. Johnson, the far dealer, has arrived in the city to pay a visit to his brother, W. H. Johnson. He was thought to have gone to the bottom of Lake Huron about a month ago, when a canoe capsized.

Soldiers Contributed.

Toledo, Aug. 6.—The Sixth Regiment, en route from Columbus, where they had been on strike duty for a week in the street car riots, have raised a purse of $300, which will be forwarded to Mayor Duffy at Columbus with instructions that the money be given to the destitute families of the strikers.

Ten Horses and Two Cows Burned.

Montreal, Aug. 6.—Ten horses, two cows and seven hundred tons of hay caught on fire in a barn which broke out last evening at La Pointe St. Lawrence. The loss is estimated at $12,000. The fire had gained considerable headway before being discovered.

Found Dead.

Ingersoll, Aug. 6.—Mrs. Elizabeth Smith, who had been a resident of this town upwards of 65 years, was found dead in her house yesterday morning about 10 o'clock. Death was due to apoplexy.

The Plain Girl

The Marquis

"Lucky beggars, most of you are," says Lord Charles, with light envy.

"Never was bit in my life; don't know what a grand passion is. Seen plenty of pretty women, too, in my time. Suppose my day will arrive perhaps when I'm older and have the family gout. One generally gets knocked over by a school-girl—doesn't one?—and acquires a past fondness for bread-and-butter and marmalade."

"Cliff away," says Clarence. "If you don't know what it means, you are the lucky one. But about the marchioness?"

"Oh! Oh! I was going to observe that everyone says she is to be the new beauty. Two or three of the fellows in the smoking-room last night had been staying at Ferndale and they swear she is the most beautiful young creature they've ever seen and as charming as she is beautiful."

"Rather wonderful that, isn't it? For, my part, most of the lovely women are confounded bores. It's the same with horses; if ever you see anything on four legs as pretty as paint, you may lay your life there's something wrong—deuce of a temper, splinted or something. But, of course, the marchioness is the exception that proves the rule, and Ferndale's a happy man!"

By this time the two men had made their way into the grounds, and were crossing the lawn.

"Well, I'll go and make myself fit," said Clarence; and Lord Charles, throwing his gun and bag to a servant, enquired if any visitors had arrived.

"Lord and Lady Ferndale, my lord," said the man. "The marquis is in his dressing-room."

Charles sprang up the stairs two at a time, and knocked at the door of one of the dressing-rooms attached to the suite set apart for the marquis and his newly married wife.

"Come in," said Vane's voice, and the next moment the two friends were hand in hand.

"Well, old man," exclaimed Charles, cheerily, "gladly to see you, awfully! How are you? Let's have a look at you!"

Vane looked up at the man and turned him around to the light.

"Vane laughed, but with an undertone of uneasiness that the other noticed instantly.

"Then!" said Charles, dropping his hat and flinging himself into a chair. "I've seen you look chipper, old man?"

"I'm well enough," said Vane, catching up the hair brushes and brushing away like mad. "In fact, I'm quite well."

"And the marchioness?" asked Charles. "I ought to have asked after her first. Always forgetting my manners. Awfully good of her to come to us so soon. And now, old man, I'll congratulate you. You were a prophet when I prophesied mischief would come of that hermit business at Newton Regis."

"Mischievous!" said Vane, with a slight smile.

Charles laughed.

According to all accounts, you're the luckiest of lucky men, Vane. We've had no end of reports of her beauty and popularity. You always were fortunate, old fellow!"

"Yes," says Vane; and he turned to tell Willis, the valet, who had entered, that he might go again. "Yes," he said. "So they say she is very beautiful, do they?"

"By George! they do! Wentworth—he's here—was melted almost to tears last night. He's been staying at Ferndale, hasn't he?"

Vane nodded.

"Who else have you got here, Charles?"

"Oh, a houseful," replied Lord Nugent, laughing. "The mother thought the marchioness wouldn't like it if we didn't have a crowd to do honor to her wedding."

"Vane changed color for a moment, then he said, quietly enough:

"Is she?"

"Yes, I'm awfully sorry; but it wasn't my fault. The mother had asked her with the rest, and I couldn't do anything without making a fuss."

"Why should you?" said Vane. "I shall be very glad to see her."

"Oh, a houseful," replied Lord Nugent, laughing. "The mother thought the marchioness wouldn't like it if we didn't have a crowd to do honor to her wedding."

"Vane started and irresolutely spelt the white necktie he was putting on.

"Lane—Clarence, you mean? Is he here?"

Charles nodded.

"Yes, and not a bad fellow, either. They tell me he is much improved upon what he was before his brother went over to the majority. Maybe he has! I didn't know him when he was only Fitzjames. But he is a decent fellow now, and a good shot. There's rather a joke against him just now."

"Seems he was rather hard on his last year, somewhere in the country—do not know where or the lady's name; he's awfully quiet on these points; but Lady Lucelle will take him in hand. I expect, and if he resists her he'll be the only man who ever did."

Vane started scarcely to be listening; two white neckties had joined the first, and were lying all crumpled and ruined.

"I sha' have to call Willis, after all," he said quietly, "I can never tie those confounded things."

"All right," said Charles. "I'll send him. I must go and get cleaned myself. Ta-ta, old fellow. Sparks knows you're here, and will let us have some of the yellow seal for dinner. Confound the fellow. I believe he's saving the rest of the bin for you!" And, with a light laugh, he sauntered out shooting for Willis as he went.

But when Willis came in the necktie was tied, and his services were not required. Indeed, it seemed as if Vane had given up all thought of conducting his toilet, for he dropped into a chair, and, thrusting his hands into his pockets, fell into a brown study; and certainly if his old chum had seen him at that moment, he would have said that he was looking awfully chippy."

At last, with a sigh, he reached for his waistcoat, and fixed his watch-guard; as he did so his fingers played with the pocket attached, and half-consciously he opened it, and discovered the portrait of a sweet face as man would wish to look upon. It was remarkably like Jeanne. After looking at it long and wistfully, my lord marquis raised it to his lips and kissed it. Not with the demure, placid affection of a husband, but with the passionate wistfulness of a lover. Then he sighed, put on his coat, and, going into the corridor, knocked at the door.

It was opened by Mrs. Fleming.

"Her ladyship says if you are ready will your lordship please go down?"

Vane nodded, and went on without a word. Most husbands would have gone in—we are afraid—grumbled at the delay, while they admired their wife's dress; but Vane receives her ladyship's command and obeys.

Mrs. Fleming closes the door and goes back to where Jeanne stands, clasping a diamond bracelet on her round white arm. A diamond tiara sparkles in her silken, wavy hair, diamonds on her taper fingers, diamonds clasp her white, slender throat.

As she seated herself in one of Werthe's masterpieces, she looks so tall and stately that she scarcely recognizes in the marchioness the slim little girl who leaped from boulder to boulder, or crouched at the helm of the Nancy Bell.

But as she turns one sees it is the same face, the same sweet, fresh loveliness not one whit hardened or dimmed by her sudden rise. There is the old little curl of the soft, expressive lips, the old natural trick of the eyelashes drooping over the dark eyes, and it is not until she detects a certain something strange, that the old light-hearted girl lacked. Is it sadness, pride, regret? What is it that gives the dark eyes, and the red, moist lips, an undefinable expression of victimhood?

It is not always there. It comes not now that Mrs. Fleming comes back, and fastens the armor, but it was there when Vane's step was heard at the door.
