The Battle of Verdun A Ghastly Massacre

Tens of Thousands of Germans Killed

An officer stationed in an artillery observation post near Douaumont gives the following account of the German assault on that position:

"Our post dominated a deep ravine which the Germans had already tried unsuccessfully to cross. Lost in the depths of the gully, their infantry could neither debouch from either end nor mount to the assault of the crests. Toward the end of the night their artillery received orders to drench our positions with shells so they could be taken. The whole region was the object of a frightful bombardment, while the summit which barred their route was the particular target of their gunners."

"Unceasingly their shells of all calibres, fell in front of our position and burst with a terrifying roar. The air was filled with hundreds of projectiles, crossing each other in all directions, and their whistling and singing and groaning and explosions, all mixed together, produced a noise truly infernal."

Calm as Though in Treatise.

"From time to time an aerial torpedo passed with the noise of an enormous automobile at full speed. All of these engines of destruction were concentrated on a space of less than ten kilometres. Their explosions came from all sides in the midst of clouds of smoke, earth and pulverized snow that ended by covering the earth as with a thick fog. Nevertheless, in the midst of this hell we saw below us a French soldier standing sentry in a hastily erected shelter and as calm as though he was in a theatre. Some times he was half covered with earth thrown over him by an exploding shell. Sometimes he disappeared completely in a cloud of smoke when a shell exploded very close. When he reappeared he was as though nothing had happened, holding his glasses to his eyes and telephone in hand. These poises have solid nerves. Suddenly an enormous explosion made the earth fly around our position. A huge shell dug a fantastic crater in front of us. Our telephone wire was broken, cutting our communication with our batteries. A soldier crawled out on his stomach to repair the break."

Death Had No Terror for him

"He advanced slowly in the midst of exploding torpedoes and shells. It seemed impossible that he could escape death. All the world believed that the German artillery was making a grand effort before the final assault. The mitrailleuses were unchained on all sides. The German expenditure of ammunition passed all imagination. Never has there been such a bombardment since the beginning of hostilities. Our soldier going to repair the wire was enveloped on all sides by explosions. He sheltered himself as best he could in craters made by shells. At last he gained the point where the wire was broken and repaired it, then sheltered himself in a trench dug by a mitrailleuse and waited for the storm to pass. Little by little the German fire relaxed. It was the supreme moment. Smoke, white mist must have been earth and snow pulverized by shells, slowly dissipated."

An Awful Spectacle.

"Before our eyes was a frightful spectacle. A little distance in front of us there had been some supporting trenches. Nothing remained of them. They had been absolutely leveled. Here and there rose vestiges of a parapet, while as to barbed wire entanglements, it was impossible to discover a trace of them. All had been cut down or disappeared under the earth of exploding shells thrown on them. The earth was as flat as though there had never been such a thing as a canonade.

Our soldier believed him self on ground freshly ploughed and harrowed ready for planting crops. Down in the ravine some black masses began to move over the white mantle of snow which was there undisturbed. They were German infantry advancing in close ranks to debouch from the ends of the trench, while others sought to gain the crests by direct assault."

Vision Becomes Infernal.

"It is our moment to act. Word went through the telephone to our batteries and the dance commenced. The vision becomes infernal. Down there between the two crests and on the slopes several regiments spread out, but the gaps between them were constantly filled by the arrival of fresh elements. We could hear a long whistle over our heads. It is our pilot shell. It falls fairly in the midst of the German soldiers. We telephone that the range is good. Then it is a deluge of shells which burst in the enemy's ranks. The position of the Germans is critical. With our glasses we can see some of them flying while others, covered with earth and blood, seek to shelter themselves behind the wall of death."

First Wave Wiped Out.

"This first wave was wiped out. There were piles of bodies on all sides. But already a new wave appears, which tries to make head against the rain of steel. It cannot advance. It gives ground."

"Our fire is rectified and our projectiles begin again to cut wide lanes through the German ranks. The region is enveloped in a thunder of bursting shells which is mixed with the sharp note of the mitrailleuse firing from the crest, which the Germans seek to capture."

"Another German wave forms, which is more formidable and more furious. The Germans swarm like rats and come on despite our shells. Our hearts stand still. Will they succeed? No."

"At this moment our heavy artillery, which has not yet been in action, begins to fire in a manner truly terrifying. Huge shells in exploding, throw great jets of flame on all sides. The ravine has become a veritable volcano. One cannot tell whether it is stones or men thrown into the air. Pieces of bodies now obstruct the gully and form a barricade before the Germans, who give way and seek safety in flight."

"Their attack, extraordinary as it was in violence and number, has failed after terrible losses and our guns, little by little, hit three fire to the German batteries in the rear, which have been powerless to silence ours."

HE FEELS LIKE A YOUNG FELLOW

Why Manitoba Man Praises Dodd's Kidney Pills

After Experimenting With Other Medicines Max Hanjook found in Dodd's Kidney Pills the Cure That He Sought.

Pleasant Home, Man. Mar. 20th (Special).—Mr. Max Hanjook, a well known resident of this place, who, after an extended period of ill-health is feeling strong and hearty again, is spreading broadcast the good news that he found a "new lease of youth" in Dodd's Kidney Pills.

"I tried all kinds of other pills, but they didn't help me very much," Mr. Hanjook says. "But Dodd's Kidney Pills have made me feel like a different man. I feel like a young fellow again. I want everybody to know that Dodd's Kidney Pills have done for me everything that has been claimed for them."

Dodd's Kidney Pills make men and women feel young again because they spread good health all over the body. Dodd's Kidney Pills act directly on the kidneys. They make the kidneys strong and healthy and thus put them in condition to strain all impurities, all the seeds of disease, out of the blood. The cleansed blood circulating all through the body gives new strength and energy everywhere. That's why Dodd's Kidney Pills are popular all over Canada.
