Union that so many Saturdays, combined with those set apart for Californias, could not be spared for "rep." football and that only home and home games could be played with each of the Island clubs. If the union did not agree, their resignation from the provincial body might have to be considered.

This was the unanimous feeling of the meeting. The members of the union expressed themselves as wanting to assist Rugby football on Vancouver Island all they could, but they were meeting with some success in developing club football in Vancouver, and they did not think that in justice to the clubs they could enter so many games with the island.
