The list of contestants is published today for the first time. You will notice it is not a very large one; there is plenty of room for energetic candidates to enter and win one of the many prizes. In fact this announcement really means the opening of the contest. Many who have sent in inquiries claim that they have not the time to devote to campaigning. We want to convince you that these prizes may be won with votes secured during your leisure moments. You are not asked to neglect your business or occupation, whatever it may be. We could not consistently expect that of you. We want you when this great contest is finally over to have nothing but the very best of feeling toward the SUN and STAR. We would not expect to look for this were we not fair and square to each and every contestant whose name appears in the list. The Contest Department is ever at your service in the matter of advice or suggestion which may help you win the prize which you want most. So do not delay, but fill out a nomination blank at the bottom of the page and send it to the Contest Manager. He will either call or send some one to convince you of the vast importance of having your name in this list when it next appears. You really cannot afford to miss this opportunity.

LONDON NEWS AND GOSSIP BY LETTER

King Startles Many by Wearing Soft Hat With Frock Coat

LONDON, July 11.—The summer show of the Royal Horticultural Society in London is finer than ever this year, and special precautions are being taken to protect rare specimens of flowers and plants.

It is not that they are likely to be carried away bodily by thieves or to have blooms cut from them, though there have been instances of both forms of theft in past years, but what is likely to happen is that unscrupulous growers may indulge in "another nipping," a simple operation for export.

The author is the little bag at the top of each stamen containing the pollen or fertilizing dust, which must be conveyed to the pistil before any seed can be formed.

When the pollen of one flower is accidentally or deliberately applied to the pistil of another with different characteristics hybrids are produced; which in the case of orchids, as every amateur knows, may be most curiously formed and marked, and therefore very valuable. The "father sneek" as he is known among horticulturists, always has a long thumbnail. While apparently examining the centre of a flower he slips off one of the tiny anthers and carries it on his nail till he can secretly put it in a little box.

He hastens home, and as soon as possible plants with the pollen of the stolen anther such plants as he hopes to fertilize. Seeds form in due course, and he gets possibly a flower superior to that from which the anther was stolen.

At the Royal Horticultural Show every rare flower is watched over by a stalwart and eagle-eyed guardian appointed by the grower. In the background lurk watchful police, and the anther sneek will have no easy task to procure his spoil. Wire-screens ruin all the effects of grouping, so the only way to protect the precious anther is by having custodians always about.

Once more King Edward has set a new style and given a momentary shock to fashionable men who pride themselves upon wearing only what is absolutely correct at certain times on certain occasions.

A soft, light-colored Homburg hat with a frock coat these arbiters of style do not consider correct, and when the king at a house party not long ago appeared arrayed after the manner one Sunday the men present gasped with astonishment, but the king can do no wrong, so, of course, they did likewise.

The king's frock coat was worn with gray trousers, white waistcoat and black tie, but instead of the requisite top hat, so sleek and shiny, there was an unpretentious but thoroughly comfortably light gray soft felt Homburg hat. The frock coat had always been crowned by the top hat before, and there are some bold spirits who are still questioning the possibility of changing such an absolutely canonical style.

However, in the end the king's custom will be followed. It always is, and the Homburg hat he so favors may usurp the prerogatives of many kinds of headgear. Certainly it is comfortable, and that is a great deal.

The king sometimes startles society by these radical changes in dress, but the queen never does. She follows convention slavishly so far as wearing things which should be worn together, and she will not have anything to do with fashions which are extreme.

Two privileges, however, she reserves to herself. She never changes her style of hair dressing, no matter what the prevailing mode may be. For years she has clung to the high coiffure, coils of hair or the top of her head and the fringe which was in vogue when she was young.

In her hair, too, she will not conform to prevailing modes. Gainsboroughs, bell-shaped, bouffants, high crowns, low browns come and go, but Queen Alexandra wears always the simple coiffure, which suits her delicate features.

CHICAGO, Ill., July 20.—Barney Oldfield, noted driver of automobile racing cars, was knocked down here today by a motor car as he was crossing the street. His injuries, consisting of bruises and slight contusions, were dressed at St. Luke's Hospital.

Oldfield was crossing the street with Louis Strong, another well known driver, when the accident occurred.

BRIDE OF PRINCE IS 27 YEARS HIS SENIOR

D.I. Dragos Think Schmid Millions Are Honored by Alliance

ROME, July 20.—Aristocratic Rome is talking about the recent wedding of Prince Alfonso del Drago and Mrs. Josephine Schmid, widow of a wealthy New York brewer.

The prince comes of one of the best families in Rome, the del Drago's genealogical tree running back into ancient times. Unfortunately it has not been a very prosperous family in recent years. The Roman nobility feels that the Schmid millions are honored by falling into such distinction.

Another reason for the interest taken in Rome is in the ages of the bride and bridegroom. Prince del Drago is 27 years old while the prin-

DANCE DENOUNCED BY MINISTER IN SERMON

All Who Indulge in Pastime Are Deluded Souls, He Says

SEBINGSVILLE, Pa., July 20.—Denouncing dancing in the most scathing sermon ever delivered from a local pulpit the Rev. Allen C. Shue, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal church here today surprised his auditors with his plain speaking. Mr. Shue said in part:

"It is not my business to seek popular approval. I am a minister of the gospel and have married children who have started a friendly suit to settle the estate."

larity, but to save souls. Being convinced that dancing is an enemy of righteousness, which interferes greatly with the working of the church and leads many to ruin, I must for the glory of God speak against it. I do not say that all who dance are wicked, but that they are either deluded souls or lack the spirit of the Master. If this evil were fully exposed, no doubt many who now defend it would cry out against the evil.

"Dancing is an enemy of the church. The largest denomination in America forbids its members to dance. Nearly all ministers are opposed to it. Can it be possible that these men of God are mistaken in this and that it is only a harmless recreation?"

"Dancing does far more than dull the spiritual life. It becomes in many cases a very stepping stone to hell. The modern dance is disgraceful. The position the girl takes is unladylike. If she were seen in that position with a man at any other place she would be considered indecent."

"What is it that makes young people so fond of the dance? Is it the dance itself? Could some of the conversations of dancers be heard, you would not think so. And yet the most respectable people will hug and be hugged in public in company with some who are worse than brutes."

"After the ball, what?"
