

[illegible]

unmerited, for those men were entitled to difference of opinion; his colleague's conduct he asked no favour, they were all equal before the law, and opportunity to give a fair day's labor for a fair day's pay. A great cry had been raised throughout the country against the Government for its policy of exactly those going forward in the vicinity of Saint John; the first cry after the foundation of the province was "the Government are taking away from the Railway works at all;" and when it was discovered that they were going forward with them, they said "the Government are taking away from us work," and when it was found that they would not take the best way, "that it was folly to employ them," and so on. I have seen many things have been, and it is kept up to this day, to find fault with the Government, whether right or wrong, and the wrong has referred to, it was to the appointment of Mr. Reid to the office of Provincial Secretary. That he believed was an improper appointment, because he was a man who did not sympathize with the wishes of the people. Was it not a little remarkable that while Mr. Fisher came into the Government, and Mr. Gray forgoing his Executive in reference to the question of Judges nearly 2 years previous, that he should have gone forward with the same question? He went forward with a body of men who had been guilty of greater injustice to the rights of the people by the appointment of Mr. Reid than the whole of the most important offices in the country.

In reference to the question of Emigration I wishes to enfranchise industry and frugality and seeks to give a vote to all who have £50 deposited a given time in the savings bank. For universal suffrage he was no advocate; he agreed with a leading member of the late government now on

[illegible]

The die is cast! The vote has been taken and the Government is sustained. It was scarcely to Mr. McGonaghe spoke energetically in defence of the party and its platform, and in favour of the course of action, except in the non appointment of commissioners. He warned them against such a course. He was not justified in voting against Mr. Scott.

Mr. Scott followed warmly on the same side, elaborating the same views.

Mr. McLaughlin, himself in favour of the the Government.

Mr. Watters spoke at length in favour of the amendment.

Mr. Macnaughton briefly expressed his views in favour of the amendment.

Mr. Fisher made a general reply. His speech was decidedly the best he ever delivered in the house.

The division was then taken. It being 5 o'clock, and the adjournment being at 6 o'clock, the House adjourned for the amendment 20 yeas, and 20 nays.

For the amendment.—Messrs. Fisher, Johnston Smith, Watters, Phipps, Connell, W. E. Perley, Hattaway, C. Perley, Payson, Harding, McAdam, Macnaughton, Jones, McMillan, Lewis, Gilbert, Sutton, Mitchell, Moore, and 20.

Nays.—Messrs. Gray, Wilmot, Macpherson, McPherson, Macdonald, Allan, J. Barrie, Z. Barrie, and 20.

although he had no chance of being against the Government, he was obliged, on the present occasion, to vote against it. Thus the hon. gentleman, who is christened "Orange Oculi," fallen into a severe cold himself! People do whatever about it, and they are liable to the same. It is the year 1866, and of certain other apostates having their fall broken by a good bundle of the same material; it is also stated, in certain quarters, that when by the aid of the Government, the House of Commons could they could divide the House twenty to twenty they offered a thousand pounds for a vote!

The electric telegraph is about being extended to Bathurst, in the County Gloucester. The wires have been ordered and tenders are invited for erecting the posts to be completed by the 10th June.

died at Havana on effects of scrofula, his erotic travels.