Partial Payment Purchases

Hundreds and thousands of people have built their homes during the last decade on the installment plan, and the success of this operation is proving the tremendous increase in the Building and Loan Associations.

Probably not less than fifty per cent. of these homes could have been possible with the aid of this method of partial payment purchase.

You realize that you may buy the very highest grade of stocks and bonds, trading from 5-12 p. c. to 7-12 p. c., in exactly the same manner? You do not have to tie up in advance—one small initial payment and the rest in monthly payments.

We have a booklet about this new and helpful plan that it will pay you to read. Send for one on request. Telephone write for a copy.

RUSSIA'S REPRESENTATIVE SENATOR BORAH WILL SPEAK HIS MIND
AT OPENING OF PANAMA

Admiralty will Send Two Naval Officers — Appears Improbable She will Send any of Her Warships.

St. Petersburg, Oct. 21.—It is understood that the Russian admiralty will send one or two naval officers to represent the government at the opening of the Panama Canal, probably Captain Nikolai, formerly naval attaché at Washington, or his predecessor Commander Boutakoff, or both of these officers.

The question of sending warships to take part in the celebration appears so far not to have been entertained, ostensibly because the cruising and training programmes interfere, but in reality for reasons similar to those which impelled Russia not to participate officially in the Panama "Fiesta" at San Francisco, reasons said to be dictated by the foreign office and not by naval considerations.

ARCTIC CANADA A REINDEER PARADISE

(Mail and Empire.)

Will the great stretches of Arctic territory which Canada owns ever be of real use to mankind? Alaska has its minerals, but if there be no minerals in the country east of the mountains belonging to Canada, what is there to support a population? As far east as Labrador, where the Eskimos and a few missionaries reign supreme, there are immense areas which ought to be turned to some account for the good of Canada and humanity in general. It seems to be possible to grow high-class grains and vegetables up as far as the Arctic Circle. The Canadian Government Inspector of Indian posts, who was recently in Ottawa, exhibited vegetables grown at Fort McPherson that would have done credit to a Southern Ontario farm. Territory capable of producing foodstuffs has an assured future, but it is the great Arctic wastes, where now the trapper and hunter and nomad Eskimo alone disturb the solitude, that will in future years be the subject of statesmanlike concern. The most obvious of all uses is the propagation of domesticated reindeer, to furnish nourishing meat to a population that must have meat to exist. In fact, the reindeer is said by some experts to be the coming rival of the beef animal of our civilization. It may yet furnish the meat our exhausting commercial processes would deprive us of by the depletion of the cattle supplies of the world.

An interesting monograph on the subject of reindeer propagation and its possibilities has been written, at the request of Premier Borden, by Conrad Sten, of New York. Mr. Sten was in the early nineties managing owner of trading posts in Alaska, and while there was attracted by the proposition that the domesticated reindeer of Siberia should be imported in sufficient numbers into Alaska to form a food reserve of incalculable value to the mining population. He undertook to carry out a scheme of bartering for reindeer with the Siberian nomads, and enlisted the support of a high church official who had been superintending mission work in Alaska. This churchman appropriated the idea and campaigned in the United States on behalf of the reindeer propagation movement, finally inducing the United States government to get Russia's consent to the exportation of domesticated reindeer from the Siberian nomads' herds. These nomads, the Tchukchees, were averse to selling reindeer for export, because it would lessen their trade in reindeer hides for the Eskimos of the North American continent, but finally an American government purchasing station was established, in charge of Mr. Sten. After much trouble, and some risk, he had collected several hundred deer, and conditions began to look promising.

But, through mishap, the transports which were to have come for the deer did not arrive until very late. The Spanish-American war had diverted attention. Then, after being transported, the deer were driven a thousand miles in Alaska to Port Barrow, where whaling crews were reported to be starving, but of course this was a failure. Stories of starving miners in Dawson stirred the United States Congress to appropriate $500,000 to buy more deer in Lapland. These starved to death on the sterile Alaskan coast. Then it transpired that the treasury department had not obtained
