

WOMEN TO FRONT AS A WRITER

Woodstock Dentist Attains Recognition as Author of Fiction—Has Good Future.

A new name among Canadian magazine writers is that of Dr. G. F. Clarke, eminent dentist of Woodstock (N. B.) who writes topical fiction with a bold touch. Dr. Clarke is young and ambitious and it would not be surprising if he broke into the ranks of the writers of the day.

The Brood of the Saxon, Canadian for Jan. 24, Dr. Clarke has decided to sea fight in the year 1918. A Canadian navy is patrolling the trade routes to Bermuda and the West Indies. Canadian ships meet a division of combined Austria-German fleet, which is pounding away at the old town of George. The German aerial fleet is an important part in the campaign.

G. F. CLARKE, a Woodstock dentist, who is coming to the front as a writer of magazine articles, and fiction.

It which ends in a victory for theadians.

he Coward, by Dr. Clarke, in Maclean's for February, is a story of the United Police in the great northland, and another story by Dr. Clarke, The Editor of Maclean's in an editorial is up the story thus: "Canadian are not all crowned. In this uping episode from the life of one of the North West Mounted Police, he draws a line distinction between age and bravado, a clear line between the love of adventure and the cool-headed bravery that has all personal considerations for the sake of others."

ansias Monthly for November contained another story by Dr. Clarke, The Pocket. The tale is told by a mother who kept a little shop on wharves at St. John. A cold, foggy John night, rain and sleet—the creaking and creaking of the sign above door—the dismal howling of the horn at the harbor's mouth, makes atmosphere uneasy and wild. Then Clarke brings in his character, "An old man with a wooden leg and sound one; that was as crooked as Margrove's tongue what used to tempt and bend down the wharf boy." "And I saw his eyes first on the lad, shining from his wet, whiskered face like lamps through fog." Then comes the story proper—boy that makes the shivers run down up your back. And when you end wonder how much of the story is and how much is fancy of the old's brain.

Balfour and the Pledge.

(London Times).

An amusing incident occurred at Glasgow yesterday, when Mr. Balfour gave second Gifford lecture. When he opened to take a drink of water just introducing a subject with the remark, "I will now fulfil the pledge," the sound of unexpected cheers surprised the lecturer and most of those who were following his argument.

An Editorial Note.

(Halifax Herald).

An alcoholic correspondent wrote a letter to one of the Nova Scotia country papers, complaining bitterly of the condition of the village streets.

After every rain," he wrote, "the feet lie in the ditches for hours."

The paper printed the letter in full in the following "Ed. Note":

So does our esteemed correspondent.

AGRICULTURE

Alfalfa King Buys 10,000 Sheep, Which Will Graze on 60,000 Acre Farm—Women Farmers Have Succeeded in Canada.

A considerable impetus, says the Canadian, will be given the sheep breeding industry of Saskatchewan this year, as the result of a purchase of 10,000 sheep, to be used for breeding purposes, which has just been made by W. T. Smith, the alfalfa king of Maple Creek. These sheep are being imported into the province through the port of Calgary (Alta.), and this immense flock of sheep will be put to grass on the big 60,000-acre farm which Mr. Smith owns.

W. T. Smith is a man who operates on a very large scale, and one of the big undertakings which he is now conducting is the construction of an irrigation scheme, the main canal of which is 11 miles in length and will cost $500,000 by the time it is ready for use.

This canal will supply artificial moisture for 8,000 acres of alfalfa beds, which until reclaimed was a shrub land. Two large steam engines and plowing outfits have been engaged in breaking up the soil, which has been plowed 18 inches deep to the shrub root.

Providing Fodder for Cattle.

The root has been removed and burned and the land worked down with disc and drag harrow, and specially constructed shovels, until it is put in a fair state of cultivation. Then a market gardener's onion patch, Mr. Smith anticipates producing 15,000 tons annually from these beds, and this will be used to feed his 3,000 Hereford cattle and the balance exported.

Mr. Smith is a bachelor, 72 years of age. He is hale and active, a millionaire more than once and is a native of Kentucky. Some forty years ago he came to this country, and located in the ranch country, ninety-nine miles north of Maple Creek, and 100 miles northeast of Medicine Hat, the latter being his post office address and place of business.

Gradually he gathered around him immense herds of horses and cattle numbering several hundred head. Presently the influx of immigration commenced to stir up the big ranching areas, and it was then that Mr. Smith decided to purchase some 64,000 acres in the valley, and a large portion of this he is putting to use for the cultivation of alfalfa and other crops. He has succeeded in this venture that today he is known all over the west as the "Alfalfa King."

Women Farmers.

The concluding part of Mrs. Constance E. Hamilton's article on Women Farmers in Canada, is given here:

The girls who look forward to the type of farming suggested, who are usually a good class and should be acceptable to any community. Even the question of the horse and plough does not seem to daunt some women, and Old Country girls are usually specially gifted as regards horses.

We are apt to hold up our hands in holy horror at the suggestion that girls should do such work as ploughing, driving the sulky plough with its comfortable seat and the hay rake where the driver is seated, yet no one seems to mind them playing a hard game of baseball or standing all day at the wash-tub—however, granted that ploughing and cultivating are hard jobs, how shall we overcome the difficulty of the hired hand? It is of paramount importance for small fruit and vegetable that the soil should not be too heavy, but easily workable with the ordinary hand hoe, palliatives, etc. Is there any reason why we should not put out our own tools to the person using them?

Make Implements Lighter.

Let us get our minds away from the implements used by men, and think of making our hoes, our wheelbarrows, our hand cultivators, a little lighter and smaller to fit the women—even ploughs and harrows for a light soil might be made smaller, and could be drawn by a pony or donkey, and a little delivery wagon might be made to scale.

It must be remembered that such women and girls, by reason of their early lives and perfected surroundings, are by no means in physical condition when they reach the reforming farm, yet it has been proved that there is a marked heightening of health and vigor due to their out-door life. How much more possible could such work be made for normal young women, intelligent and eager, who undertake the work from the love of it. Here is the opinion of one of two such girls. One writes:

"I think many women fail in agriculture because they don't realize that their own store of energy is as much working capital as the cash in the bank, and attempt work which requires too great an outlay of physical energy, so that the result is really but a small percentage of profit on the outlay.

Has Handled Animals.

"I believe that women can do almost anything on farm or garden, but there is much that costs them so much strength and energy that it would be better not attempted or to have a man aid to do it. There is little in connection with animals that a woman can't do. I have kept horses, pigs, goats and poultry, with one girl friend's help, and I know that they are well within one's power to handle. At our hawking times I used to have a man to cut, but worked the horse rake and collector myself.

"Carriage washing is tiring work, but on a Canadian farm perhaps that need not trouble overmuch; otherwise nothing in a stable need cause a woman any difficulty, and horses are wonderfully gentle and kind to women; they usually like to see them about. I certainly hope to take up land again eventually, but cannot do so without my father's help, and he wishes me to be at least two years in the country first."

A girl from British Columbia says:

"Last year I spent eight months on a fruit ranch in Nelson (B. C.), where I worked as a pupil. I had absolutely no training or experience in such work and was totally ignorant of horticulture. I worked about the middle of March and found that most of the pruning had been done. The next job was spraying; after that came grafting, etc.

"Then there were three greenhouses where a great quantity of flowers and tomatoes were grown, and on wet days I was able to work in them. We sold a great many young plants, and I spent my spare time picking and packing. As far as I can see, I can do any of the jobs, and I am sure that I can manage a small fruit farm. She might require a man to help her occasionally with the heavier work, such as ploughing, but she could see her way to do very well managed by an energetic, strong woman."

It is to be hoped that everything possible will be done to encourage women to take up agriculture on a small scale; we might suggest this small scale as to some of the men. Perhaps in addition to our fine agricultural colleges our government may some day see their way to establishing home farms for women, where they may work either as sole laborers or as partners in the concern until they gain that practical experience so absolutely necessary before buying or leasing land of their own.

Many Old Country girls come to us with small incomes or capital, not quite enough to allow them to make their venture by themselves, and a woman's farm settlement would give them just the opportunity they need.

EFFICIENT HOUSEKEEPING

BY HENRIETTA D. GRAUEL

(Domestic Science Lectures)

Plenty of Napkins

It is not delicate china and gleaming silver alone, that mark the table of refinement. Some of the most attractive tables depend almost entirely on the pretty little napkins in use.

A napkin over the bread, one over the cake; the plate of cold meat or hot rolls protected above and below by a snowy square.

A yard of linen eighteen inches wide will make two sixteen inch squares after hemming. Or each one may be fringed to the depth of half an inch and over-stitched evenly to keep it from raveling further.

A close outline stitch round the hem, or a row of hem-stitching with a simple drawnwork border above it does not require much time to accomplish nor speak too eloquently of over-laxed eyes to be appropriate on these simple napkins.

A good Cluny lace edging makes a plain napkin into a handsome dolly or tray cloth and this lace washes as well as the linen itself.

Linen must always be shrunken before it is made up, if it were convenient it may be cut before it is wet, but it usually shrinks, like cotton in the piece.

To shrink linen:

Put it in a bowl or tub of warm water at night; it need not be folded but should be unfolded to every part as absorbent water. In the morning put out to dry-dripping wet on the clothes line. Use enough clothes pins to keep the selvage edge straight.

When every day linen begins to wear it pays in soap and laundry, and time to starch them a little; though the actual ironing of them requires a little longer. Instead of always folding napkins and table cloths in the same creases, sometimes fold in three strips and then back and forth instead of over and over. This prolongs their usefulness.

Table cloths always wear in that part that comes against the edge of the table. As soon this spots comment to show simply cut off a two inch strip from one side and from one end. Hem the raw edges and you will see the next time you use the cloth, that the middle crease is now in an entirely different place.

Linen that is not in constant use should be laid between blue tissue paper as this prevents it turning yellow and whether you have a linen closet for it or keep it in drawers always have a weight or press to put on each pile. Cedar boards about an inch thick and the size of the folded cloths and napkins are liked by most housekeepers, but some use a slab of marble and others put a brick on the board. It is the only way to keep the folds and creases in linen.

Lavender flowers give a pleasant perfume to linen receptacles and I think nothing will ever supplant this popular scent. Flowers of lavender sell in drug stores at about fifty cents a pound and they may be sprinkled on the shelves loosely. Little bags, or fat pads are better, though, as the dried flowers are dusty and blow about.

HOUSEHOLD NOTES.

A set of family scales should be in every kitchen. They will be a protection against short weights.

Sunshine is a great health giver, and to sit in the sun for half an hour each day will strengthen weak nerves.

Iron shoes should not be polished. If they become soiled, moisten a soft cloth and rub it across a piece of pure white soap. With this wash off the dirt, allowing the soap to remain on the leather, and polish with the palm of the hand.

Calves or lamb's hearts, boiled and combined with onions, served hot, will make a good inexpensive dish.

Wireproof dishes which have become brown from baking can be cleaned by soaking in a strong borax water.

All white fabrics, excepting lids, are best cleaned with soap and water. Use a stiff nail brush and plenty of soap and water. After the shoe is scrubbed, rinse off the soap and put the shoes on a stretcher and dry in the sun.

HEAR ONTARIO IS SEEDING POTATOES ACROSS THE BORDER

Carlton County Dealers Discuss the Situation—Uncle Sam Will Bar Upper Canadian Spuds if They Buy from New Brunswick.

Woodstock, N. B., Feb. 12.—The Potato Dealers' Association met yesterday afternoon with President B. Frank Smith in the chair. It was stated that all reports against the embargo on potatoes had proved unavailing and there was absolutely no present prospect of any change. Ontario dealers, claiming that no disease existed in the province, have been shipping to the American market, complying with the law in having all shipments inspected.

Recently there has been quite a heavy demand for New Brunswick potatoes for shipment to Ontario points, one concern here receiving an order for 1,000 barrels. Whether the New Brunswick potatoes were re-shipped to United States points or not is not stated, but the Ontario dealers have been notified that unless they cease bringing in New Brunswick potatoes no further shipments will be allowed to enter American territory, even when passed by inspectors.

Several of the members present were aware of an embargo being lifted in Ontario and were rather amused at the situation when it is known that the bulk of the seed potatoes in Ontario are shipped from New Brunswick. The Ontario influence that was able to have an embargo put on New Brunswick potatoes may be extending the scope of operations to Ontario.

SUMMER HOTEL UP ST. JOHN RIVER

Company Being Organized, is Announcement, With $100,000 Capital to Erect Building at Holder's Point—160 Acres of Land Purchased.

Saturday, Feb. 14.

It was announced last night that a company, capitalized at $100,000, is being organized, including several local people and a prominent Boston man, for the purpose of developing an up-to-date summer resort at Holder's Point, near seventeen miles up the St. John river, formerly known as Henderson's Point. A hundred and sixty acres of land has been purchased at one of the prettiest spots on the river, a feature of it being a long stretch of sandy beach.

It is proposed to erect a large three-story concrete hotel on a little hill overlooking the river, and also to provide tennis courts and a golf course. The work of development is to be started at once and it is expected that it will be sufficiently far advanced to have the hotel opened this summer. It is proposed to erect tents on the property and rent them by the week as is done in many other places. The capital, it is announced, has been practically all subscribed.

Holder's Point was formerly known as Henderson's Point. It is situated on the right side of the river going up, about eight miles from Westfield. The location is a fine one for such an enterprise and is well known to persons accustomed to travelling on the river. It is free from fog and has a southerly exposure. The land is a black loam well adapted to cultivation, and the company, it is announced, will raise vegetables for use in the hotel.

A concrete wharf is to be built near what is known as Kimball's Cove, which is a fine harbor for motor boats and yachts.

The St. John river, with its famous scenery, has long suggested itself as a proper place for larger summer hotels. The company also proposes to have a fast motor boat service between their place and St. John.

Provincial Appointments.

The Royal Gazette this week contains the appointment of David McAllister, of Titusville, Kings county, to be an auctioneer, Christopher Spence, of St. John, to be an issuer of motor licenses, and John Spence, G. A. Kimball, and J. E. Smith of St. John, and Francis Xavier Peters, of Northumberland county, to be justices of the peace.

GOOD MARKET FOR CANADIAN APPLES IN SOUTH AFRICA

Ottawa, Feb. 12.—Canadian Trade Commissioner W. J. Egan, of Capetown, reports to the trade and commerce department that opinion among the various dealers varies in reference to Canadian apples received in South Africa during the past year. Durban dealers report grading and packing of Nova Scotia fruit to be all right in every particular. They complain, however, that Nova Scotia "Kings and Wagners" are the whole are a great disappointment, as they were poor in color and in keeping qualities. The Ontario fruit left nothing to be desired.

Mr. Egan says the South African market, during October, November and December is a splendid one for good Canadian apples and will command high prices.

We would say to the customer and also the farmer, who are not customers:

"It Will Pay You To Buy Bruce's Seeds"
