Under-Currents By The Duchess

"You are bitter" says he with sudden anger. "From the first you regarded me as an enemy and now..."

"Was it not right? What else are your cries she refusing to hear him further. The worst—the most contemptible. What her voice breaking into a sob of terrible humiliation 'have you not understood. Are you dead to the shame I endured this morning? When that old man insulted me by his hateful command, do you think I did not feel it. I tell you every word he said to me has burned itself into my brain so keenly did it touch me. I was nothing. Nothing!' with an inexpressible burst of indignation. 'My consent was a thing of no importance at all. I was a mere bit of goods and chattels to be disposed of as your father saw fit. I—'

"I refuse to listen to this—"

"You shall. You have brought this on me; you shall hear how it sounds to me, to any right-thinking person. I was treated by your father—with your knowledge and approval, no doubt—as though I were a mere nonentity the poor dependent whose will was very properly merged in that of her benefactor's. Nay, more, I was clearly expected to kneel at his feet and express myself thankful for the benefit conferred upon me—the benefit being..."

"She makes a slight but sharp movement expressive of the deepest, most poignant self-abasement."

"You degrade yourself and me when you talk like that," says Seston, who is now as pale as she is. "For Heaven's sake try to remember how abominably you misrepresent the whole thing. If my father had a freak of this kind in his head—a desire to see you married to his only son—surely there was no discourtesy to you contained in such a desire. It was rather you must see that it was a well-meant arrangement on his part. It was more boldly 'He loves me; in wishing to see you my wife he paid you the highest compliment he could. I defy you to regard it in any other light.'"

"You plead his cause well—it is your own," says she tapping the back of the chair with angry fingers. "Why take the trouble? Do you think you can bring me to view the case in a lenient light. Am I likely to forget that you—you aided and abetted your father in trying to force me into this detested marriage?"

"I may put that marriage out of your head," says he slowly "you have taken it too seriously. I assure you I would not marry you now if you were as willing as you are unwilling. I can hardly put it stronger."

"That fact does not alter the past; and of that alone I complain. The future is in my hands. I have forgiven you. I remember that you would have agreed to your father's proposal; that is enough. You are willing to marry me—he said so; and I tell you nothing once again her lovely condemnatory eyes lit his. "That was the act of a coward."

"You have caused me a coward since before," he remains her with a peculiar smile. "There is no occasion to repeat that insult. I have not forgotten it."

"Why should I not repeat it? Why should I not tell you now, once for all," says she "what I think of you? Do you know" drawing closer in a heavy tired way as if all the youth and spirit had gone out of her "that I did not suspect you of it? I never dreamt you would be guilty of such meanness. I did not like you—no, I disliked you, in?"

"I do not know what you mean before," needing him. "though something always warned me to avoid you, though some good angel urged me always to distrust you, I ever in my wildest moments believed you capable of such baseness as this!"

"Her eyes are slight. Hardly anyone would have known this pain, passionate indignation, if it were not the gentle Vera of every-day life. As for Seston, a longing to compel her into a recognition of falsity of her opinion of him is the one powerful feeling that possesses him; at this moment, it sees us to him that he hates her as she stands there before him, defiant, contemptuous—beautiful. The loose sleeves have slipped back from her, leaving her exquisitely moulded arms bare; arms soft and rounded, and white as the moonlight that is stealing into the room—across the polished boards steal upwards to her perfectly lovely face. Such a lovely thing she seems, one very meet for love's demands—and yet how cold, how unwomanly in that scornful mood!"

"You do me too much honour when you take the trouble thus to analyse me," he says with a bitter smile. "Of the baseness of which you accuse me, I confess, however, I hold myself guiltless."

"Do you? I think not," says she, smiling in turn. "You are clever enough to grasp the full meaning of my words. Who but the poorest of his kind would, for filthy lucre's sake, elect to wed a woman as distasteful to him as he was to her?"

"Hardly that, think" regarding her curiously. "The balance there is not even. And as to your allusion to 'filthy lucre' do not follow you. As you yourself remarked just now you were without fortune."

Soy. Lelton. Sovereign: We the members of the Myrtle Circle No. 8 regret that you are about to leave this city for an American one. We hope that the change will be beneficial to you. We shall miss your smiling face and help you have given this circle and hope that in the near future you will be back among us again. As a token of our esteem we ask you to accept this small token which we now present to you, which will serve as a remembrance of this good time we have spent together, and we wish you God-speed in behalf of Myrtle Circle No. 8 M. Hainsworth. Clerk.

It is stated that the Scott Act, which is in force in Quebec since May 1918 will be repealed by the Federal authorities, this having been agreed to in the event of the referendum proving favorable to beer and wines.

HAVE ROSY CHEEKS AND FEEL FRESH AS A DAISY—TRY THIS!

Boys glass of hot water with phosphate before breakfast washes out poisons.

To see the tinge of healthy bloom in your face, to see your skin get clearer and clearer, to wake up without a headache, backache, coated tongue or a nasty breath, in fact to feel your best, day in and day out, just try inside-bathing every morning for one week.

Before breakfast each day, drink a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it as a harmless means of washing from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour bile and toxins, thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach. The action of hot water and limestone phosphate on an empty stomach is wonderfully invigorating. It cleans out all the sour fermentations, gases and acidity and gives one a splendid appetite for breakfast.

A quarter pound of limestone phosphate will cost very little; the drug store but is sufficient to demonstrate that just as soap and hot water cleanses, sweetens and freshens the skin, so hot water and limestone phosphate act on the blood and internal organs. Those who are subject to constipation, bilious attacks, acid stomach, rheumatic twinges, also those whose skin is sallow and complexion pallid are assured that one week of inside bathing will have them both looking and feeling better in every way.

With Fingers! Corns Lift Off

Don't hurt a bit to lift any corn or callus right off. Try It!

For a few cents you can get a small bottle of the magic drug frezone recently discovered by a Cincinnati man.

Just ask at any drug store for a small bottle of frezone. Apply a few drops upon a tender, aching corn or callus and instantly all soreness disappears and shortly you will find the corn or callus so loose that you lift it off with the fingers.

Just think! Not one bit of pain before applying frezone or afterwards. It doesn't even irritate the surrounding skin.

Hard corns, soft corns or corns between the toes, also hardened calluses on bottom of feet, shrivel up and fall off without hurting a particle. It is almost magical.

Ladies! Keep a tiny bottle of the frezone in the dresser and never let a corn or callus ache twice.
