

A black and white photograph of a forest path. The path is a dirt road that curves slightly to the right, leading into a dense forest. The trees are tall and thin, with some having thick, textured trunks. The foliage is dense, and the overall scene is a natural, wooded landscape. The text is overlaid on the upper portion of the image.

Canadian Forestry Journal

MARCH, 1916.