

THE STRONGER SEX.

Why Rob Barlette is a woman's suffragist.

Why I am a woman's suffragist? Because I am a man.

But the figure never moved or made an answer, and something in its rigid lines caused the officer to bend forward and peep into the pale face.

"Died, by Jove! died!"

Some one threw open the door and stood in the blaze of the hall chandelier—a handsome man, in evening dress, who exclaimed, angrily:

"What means this noise at my door? Take your tramp away!"

The policeman glanced from the cold, dead face of the girl to the lighted hall, the soft carpet, and warmth that had been so near her.

"The woman's dead," he said, quietly—"from I think."

"Dead?" and the gentleman came nearer, only to stagger back with a cry of horror, and one word, under his breath, that no one heard—"Dead!"

"Bring her in," said a soft, sweet voice behind him. "Perhaps we can restore her to life. Bring in the body, and I will try to revive it."

The officer obeyed, and as they pulled aside the poor old shawl from her breast they found a little baby.

"Oh, poor, poor little darling!" sobbed the pretty lady, smiling down at her laughing baby, and looking at the rich, creamy silk dress she wore.

"It is not quite dead, I think we can save it, though it is nursing so nicely."

A warm bath and much rubbing brought the little fellow around all right and he sat up a feebly well.

In the meantime the dead woman was removed to a distant chamber and the police authorities notified of her unhappy end.

Frank Keithler, at whose door she had been found, appeared half-dressed, but few words escaped him, although his pretty young wife was lost in her sympathy and regret.

The woman was buried, and Mrs. Keithler with tearful eyes, rocked on her breast the little black-headed baby accompanied by a nurse.

"Let us keep him, Frank; the poor little fellow seems to have been especially sent to us by Providence. He is being so nicely nursed, and seems naturally a strong and healthy child."

A dusky red glow all over her husband's face, as he said, smiling, to himself:

"Do as you wish; it does not matter to me."

The little wretch grew strong and ardent, and reached out loving arms to the dark-haired man, who was laughing so merrily at his gaze.

"How fond he is of you, Frank," said the young wife one day, "and you of him, and with a merry laugh, she lifted her head enough like you to be your own child. Why not adopt him and give him your name?"

What a lucky chance it was the poor mother reached out her arms!

Again that strange red glow in the husband's face, but he only bent and kissed his wife, and tossed the crowing baby on high, as he thought:

"God forgive me for my sins and my mother's here. Bear my name and share my wealth, but the secret of his birth is best to lock within my own breast. My child my little child!"

But one day this man of the world rode out in his splendid carriage, accompanied by his lovely wife and adopted son, and as he passed a sequestered spot in the crowd a shot was fired and a bullet pierced his breast.

The wife screamed and fainted, the nurse retained his seat, while the wife remained motionless, her carriage quietly, until it was met by a friendly luncheon, who discovered the dreadful deed.

The world was astonished, the wife horrified and broken-hearted, and the murderer could not be found.

Years later in the Western camp of rough miners a man died, and to the comrades who bent over him he said:

"I've lived a square life, boys; ain't done nothing but what I ought to do."

"You've done it well, I'm glad to hear that," said one of the men, "but I'm sorry, the money leaves you, it leaves you in a heap."

"I know, but I've got all I've got to leave it to," he said, "and I've got to go."

"That's all, good-by, and may God be with you," said the men, and he went on his way.

And the judge stepped in who adjusts all wrong, and the new life began.

Care For The Eyes

The eyes by expelling, from the blood, the humors which weaken and injuriously affect them. For this purpose use Ayer's Sarsaparilla. It gives tone and strength to the digestive apparatus, and, by purifying the blood, removes from the system every scrofulous taint.

After having been constantly troubled with weak eyes from childhood, I have at last found in Ayer's Sarsaparilla, a remedy which has relieved and cured me. My general health is much improved by the use of this valuable medicine. — Mary Ann Sears, 7 Hollis st., Boston, Mass.

Nearly Blind.

I have used Ayer's Sarsaparilla in my family for over nine years. My oldest daughter was greatly troubled with Scurvy, and, at one time, it was feared she would lose her eyesight. Ayer's Sarsaparilla has completely restored her health, and her eyes are as well and strong as ever. — G. King, Killington, Vt.

I have, from a child, until within a few months, been afflicted with Sore Eyes. I have used Ayer's Sarsaparilla for this complaint, with beneficial results, and considered it a valuable blood purifier. — Mrs. C. Phillips, Glover, Vt.

My little girl was badly afflicted with Scurvy, and suffered very much from Weak and Sore Eyes. I was unable to obtain relief for her until I commenced administering sarsaparilla. This medicine has cured her of Scurvy, and her eyes are now well and strong. — F. B. Hastings, N. Y. Prepared by Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass.

My son was weak and debilitated, troubled with Sore Eyes and Scrofulous Humors. By taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla his eyes have been cured, and he is now in perfect health. — A. H. Merriam, Harrison Ave., Lowell, Mass.

I suffered greatly, a long time, from weakness of the eyes and impaired blood. I tried many remedies, but received no benefit until I began taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla. This medicine cured me. My eyes are now strong, and I am in good health. — Andrew J. Simpson, 117 East Merrimack St., Lowell, Mass.
