Rare Bargains in FAIRVIEW SHORTHORNS

I have more cattle than I have feed for, so am willing to sell a few, of both sexes, at prices I never expected to quote. The bulls are mostly young, or I can supply mature ones, the females are of different ages. All are cattle that a man only gets on bargain days. No trouble to quote prices or show the stock.

garden products were well shown, grain perhaps not in such large quantities as formerly, on account of the fact that threshing and harvesting were still under way, but in the vegetable line quantity as well as quality was in evidence.

Poultry made a fairly representative exhibit. Innisfail has something of a reputation as a poultry district and we understand the local Poultry Association feel that the exhibits of poultry were sufficient to warrant them taking steps towards having a winter show. A petition was circulated among poultry fanciers at the fair, asking the department of agriculture to take steps in the near future towards starting a poultry breeding and experiment station. The movement should be enthusiastically supported by local dealers.

ARMY HORSE UNDER FIRE.

We had in our company a young German named Schultz. His horse was his especial pride. Sometimes Schultz went to sleep without rations, but his horse never. No matter how scarce or how hard it was to get forage, the young German's horse always had an evening feed, a thorough rubbing down, a loving pat, and a "Good-night, Frank," in two languages—broken English and German. Many a time have I seen Schultz skirmish for a lunch for his horse when we halted to make coffee instead of preparing his own lunch. While the rest of us stayed in our tents and read or played cards, Schultz would keep spirit of the work as completely as his master. That night at 9 o'clock the brigade camped.

The moment Frank was unsaddled he lay down. Schultz thought it was because the horse, like himself, was tired, and after patting him and telling him in both languages what a splendid fellow he had been that day, and thanking him for carrying him safely through one of the hottest battles, he busied himself with getting supper. In the forage bag were several extra ears of corn. After his own repast of black coffee, crackers and uncooked white pork, such a banquet as many a soldier has been more thankful for than he was for the feast of last Thanksgiving, Schultz shelled the corn and took it to Frank. The horse did not welcome him as usual, did not rest his head on his master's shoulder and look, if he did not speak, thanks for such a master. He didn't hear Schultz announce in German that he was coming with a double ration. Frank was dead and stiffening, showing that soon after lying down life had departed.

When Schultz realized that his pet was dead he threw the corn down, dropped by the side of the animal, tenderly laid one hand on his neck and, with the other, gently rubbed his head, as he had done many times before, and sobbed like a child. In talking about his loss the next day, he said: "My poor Frank couldn't tell me he was badly hurt and ask to go to the hospital, as I would have done had I been shot. He carried me all day as if he thought it was his duty."

Frank's company for hours, sometimes talking German to him and sometimes English. Some of our horses showed lack of care; Frank's was always in good order; in camp he glistened like a new plug hat, and seemed as fond of his master as his master of him. When the Atlanta campaign opened, in May, 1864, there was not a prouder soldier or a prettier horse than Schultz and Frank in the 1st.

Our first fight of note in that campaign was at Varnell's Station, May 9. Somebody—never mind who—made a mess of it. Our little brigade, the 2nd of the 1st cavalry division, consisting of the 2nd and 4th Indiana and the 1st Wisconsin, commanded by Col. O. H. LaGrange was thrown against Gen. Joe Wheeler's entire command, and we fought it all day. We started to charge, but were halted in a piece of woods, and were ordered to fight on foot. We were already under fire and in considerable confusion, and only a portion of the command heard the order, so it happened that some of us fought as cavalry and some as infantry. Schultz remained mounted and did heroic service. Early in the fight his pet was shot. As the animal made but little fuss over it, and steadied down quickly, his rider thought it was only a slight wound and remained in the battle all day, having travelled many miles in the performance of important and dangerous tasks, the wonderful animal seeming to enter into the

and that things would go wrong if he didn't, and when the battle was over, and I was getting supper, he lay down and died.

"That horse was a better soldier than I am—than any man in the regiment. Not one of us would have fought all day with such a hurt as that. No one would have expected it of us, yet I expected it of Frank and he did not fail me." With this outburst, the poor fellow broke down again, and none of his comrades made light of the young German's sorrow. They knew it was sincere.—James F. Lyon, in Chicago Times-Herald.

That Bates-bred Shorthorns yet have their friends and admirers in Britain and South America is evidenced by the report of a recent auction sale of fifty head from the herd of Mr. Joseph Harris, Penrith, when 40 females averaged $495. The highest price, 285 guineas, was realized for Duchess 139th, a four-year-old cow purchased by Mr. H. Lewis, Pembrokehire, a dozen others selling for 105 to 270 guineas each. The lowest price was 55 guineas.

At an auction sale, on Sept. 18th, of a portion of the dairy Shorthorn herd of Mr. W. Arkell, Fairford, Wiltshire, 38 cows and heifers averaged £36, the highest price being 72 guineas for Ursulina 34th. Milker 7th was purchased by H. S. Arkell, Canada, for 46 guineas.
