PUBLIC SERVICE
ON TERRACE

Large Gathering at the Sunday Afternoon Event

Addresses by Mayor MacBride, W. G. Raymond and Rev. Mr. Oke.

In accordance with the proclamation of the Ontario Government for special anniversary services to commemorate Britain's entry into the war, a public service took place on Jubilee Terrace on Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock. There was a large attendance and despite the threatening showers, about 2,500 gathered to listen to the speakers. The service opened with the playing of the National Anthem by the Dufferin Rifles band, followed by the singing of the same selection by the audience. The Rev. David Alexander pronounced the opening prayer.

Mayor's Address
Mayor MacBride briefly outlined the purpose of the gathering. In obedience to Royal proclamation they were assembled to commemorate Remembrance Day. It was on Aug. 4th, 1914, that the people of the British Empire had embarked on the greatest moral cause of all known history. Since that memorable day, almost every home in our own beloved land has given out for more or less of its members to our fighting forces, in order that the curse of Prussian militarism might be crushed, and the free nations of the earth permitted to enjoy the blessings of liberty. We were all determined to fight on until that task was accomplished. It was significant that during those four years not a single complaint had been heard from the brave men who were actually doing the fighting and suffering the real hardships of war. If the boys on the firing line were of good cheer, was it not up to us at home to "carry on," and not let petty differences divide us. Unfortunately there were a few individuals in our midst who, conscious of their own shortcomings, did not hesitate to turn the "current of suspicion" against public men. It was the duty of decent people in every community to put their heel down hard on propaganda designed to cause dissension. "Evil to him who evil thinks," was a good quotation. Let us all speak out frankly, and let it be known emphatically that we at home intend to back up the boys "over there." Neither Bolshevism nor profiteering should be permitted in Canada. Both were a blight in our national life. While many of us had honest differences on matters of general policy with the Government, we were not true democrats if we did not abide by the will of the majority. These differences could be solved at the right time and place, but at present we should present a united front to the enemy. Let us fight "militarism" on the battlefield and "militarism" (the love of gold) at home, and then we should be worthy of the sacrifices of our bravest and best.

"Nearer My God to Thee" was played by the band, and was afterwards sung by the audience, led by Mr. Friend.

Rev. Mr. Oke
The meeting was then addressed by Rev. Capt. Oke, a man who had seen service in France. Capt. Oke stated that the service was held to review the situation. During the past four years all had not been victorious, but we are four years nearer the end of the war. We are determined to continue to the end in faith and confidence until we are victorious. This war must last until some one is de-

LT. LEBAILLY AND HIS TANK.

The picture represents a tank similar to those that were commanded by Lt. LeBailly. The man shown on top is his brother Maurice, also in command of a squadron, and who narrowly escaped death himself in the engagement his brother Ferdinand received the Legion of Honor. His tank was struck by a shell and exploded a few seconds afterwards. He escaped with a slight injury in the leg, but all the other members of the crew except one, were either killed outright or burnt to death.

When peace comes it must be a peace strong enough to control two continents, and to ensure the destruction of the German military ideals. Great Britain had waited until the last possible moment before declaring war, but she had been the fifth power to raise herself against the tyrant. To-day banners of twenty-two nations floated in the allied camp. Mr. Raymond declared it a fortunate day for the allies when the United States had entered the war, fighting with us, united by the cause of liberty, one which had divided her from us.

"Liberty is the common ideal of our men at the front," declared the speaker, "and it is up to us to see them through. Whether our lot, we shall never give up. Had we won in 1914 it would have been the ruin of our liberty. Let us see that we are great before, but now we are brought to a proper realization of our true values."

Navy Supreme.
There were many things for which to be thankful on the fourth anniversary of the war. The first was that during four years of hostilities, the British fleet had maintained the supremacy of the seas in greater measure than ever before. It had been triumphant in overcoming the submarine menace, "we have sunk more subs" declared Mr. Raymond, "than the Germans have built since the war."

Service was a thing virtually unknown until the war came. People had been accustomed to privation of any sort. The true worth of the women of the empire had never before been fully realized. For during the past four years no one had helped more nobly than our women. They never said "give up," though some men did. Mr. Raymond expressed the opinion that every patriot should be eternally cursed. The cry to-day was "Carry On" and the men who raised it were the men who would win the war. Mr. Raymond dealt scathingly with "Lord Lansdowne, who wanted to give up and place the empire under German rule. He doubled the policy of naming a local park after such a man."

The world marvelled at the valor exhibited by our men over there. Canada had sent overseas a total of 450,000 men. Of these 30,000 had been killed or disabled, 42,000 having made the supreme sacrifice. Yet they did not flinch when duty called; their response was prompt, instinctive, cheerful.

"Patriotism" declared the speaker, "in conclusion, is a component of the Canadian nature, and all praise to our boys who have so gallantly demonstrated theirs over there."

At the close of Mr. Raymond's address, Mayor MacBride referring to Lord Lansdowne's peace proposals said that his speech was the natural result of his life of "successful selfishness."

Proceedings closed with the National Anthem.

Hurt In Flying

Local Aviator Seriously Injured by Fall in the Old Land

Mrs. Frances Dempster, 51 William street, this morning received word that her son, Flight Lieutenant Duncan F. Dempster, has been seriously injured in a flying accident in England. Lt. Dempster went overseas only a few months ago, after having been attached to the Royal Air Force in Canada for a year, in which time he was successful in winning his commission. He was formerly a clerk in the Bank of British North America. Lt. Dempster is Mrs. Dempster's eldest son, and a wide circle of friends will unite in hoping for his safe recovery. The family have cabled to the air ministry in England for further particulars regarding the young man's injuries.
