BECAUSE SHE REFUSED HIM

A Manchester Merchant Killed the Woman and Himself.

Paris, April 19.-Another sensational crime has been committed here. A man named Ernest, 57 years old, a German, by birth, but a naturalized British subject, who was director of British subject, who was director of a Manchester firm, shot and killed Mme. Englander, a divorcee, for refus-ing to marry him, and then committed suicide. The tragedy occurred at Mme. Englander's residence. Ernest left written instructions that his body be cremated without religious cerd-mony, and that the body of Mme. Eng-

A VERY SERIOUS SCANDAL ALLEGED

Charges Against Two Members of an Imperial Committee.

London, April 18. — The Globe this afternoon scents a gross scandal in its alleged discovery that two members of the governmental committee, appointed a year ago to determine the value of various explosives, have taken out patents in their own names. The Globe says:—"Sir William Roberts-Austen secured a patent for improvements in detonators, while Sir Wm. Crooke has patented nitro explosives for artillery. When the committee was appointed Lord Lansdowne, then War Minister, assured inventors and manufacturers that they might submit their products to the committee in the most confidence. Sir Michael Hicks-Beach Makes a Rather Sensational Budget Speech-A Very Heavy Deficit Anticipated-New Taxes Proposed.

London, April 19 .- The Chancellor of the Exchequer, Sir Michael Hicks-Beach, rose in the House of Commons yesterday at 4.18 p.m., amidst rounds of cheers and commenced the budget statement. His opening sentence was not promising. "During the last five years," said the Chapcellor, "we have een invariably able to congratulate the House on a general increase in the presperity of the country, but the year 900, especially the last six months, showed symptoms of a change. Our foreign trade during the year considerably increased, but in value rather than in volume. This had been mainly derived from the high prices of certain articles, notably coal, which naturally must have injured important industries, especially railways. Nevertheless, the revenue for the past year had shown no signs of decrease, and the exchequer receipts showed a surplus of £2,865,000 over the estimates. He was bound to say, however, that the excess had been due to forestallment on dutiable articles. But for this his estimates would have been barely realized. Much could be said for and against forestallment, but it was an unmitigated nuisance to financial statisticians. The forestallments of 1899-1900 amounted to £3,250,000 which properly belonged to the revenue of the last year. The forestall-ments of the past year somewhat ex-ceeded the previous year. He would say that the consuming power of the people was maintained, but there was no material evidence of the expansion of that power beyond what was fairly attributable to increase of population. Sir Michael Hicks-Beach then pro-ceeded to review the various

ITEMS OF REVENUE, mentioning that the revenue from beer was £4,000,000 less than the esti-mate. "That decrease," said the mate. "That decrease," said the Chancellor of the Exechequer, "is probably attributable to the fact that probably attributable to the fact that very many beer drinkers are in South Africa, and also to the decrease in the spending power of the people owing to the high price of coal. Experience has shown that we have practically reached the limit in the profitable taxation of spirits." The receipts from the death duties were £1,500,000 below those of the preceding year, but he had better expectations for next year. The prolongation of the war and the absence of business on the Stock Exchange were responsible for the unsatisfactory yield from stamps. In noting that the yield from the income tax was £1,150,000 above the estimate, the Chancellor of the Exchenger remarked that in the twelve years the income on which taxation was paid had been increased by no less than £120,000,000—a fact that he hoped the House would remember when he reached a later part of his speech. cipal speaker at a banquet given last evening to the Ashanti field force, Col. evening to the Ashanti field force, Col. Wilcocks presiding. Mr, William St. John Brodrick, Secretary for War; Lord Raglan, Under Secretary for War; Sir Evelyn Wood, and other prominent men were present. In the course of his speech Mr. Chamberlain referred to the war Mr. Chamberlain as "one of the greatest struggles in which the country has been engaged during the last hundred years, the absorbing interest of which has diverted sorbing interest of which has diverted public attention from the great sued yesterday contains three tele-grams sent by Holland to President Kruger before the war, impressing upon the head of the Transvaal the advisability of conciliation and assur-ing him, that Germany shared Holland's opinion. It was added that both nations were convinced that any appeal to the powers would have no re-sult. Mr. Kruger replied that he had always been conciliatory, but he could not abandon liberty or acknowledge Great Britain's suzerainty by allowing British subjects to vote in the Re-public. He added that he did not intend to appeal to anyone.

MADE EXTRA CONCESSIONS. The despatches in the blue book published yesterday reveal the fact that the government went further in the direction of endeavoring to conciliate the Boers than Milner and Kitchener were in favor of going, and discourag-ing as the former's estimate of the position of affairs in February was his extreme views for the future of South Africa will tend to reconcile the country, whatever sacrifices it may still be called upon to make.

WAS THE CHILD CHOKED TO DEATH

Two Women in Toronto Arrested

Toronto, April 19. — Mrs. Emily Baldwin, 52 Bond street, and Lilly Smith, an inmate of the same house, were arrested yesterday morn-Smith, an inmate of the same house, were arrested yesterday morning on a warrant charging them with the murder of the newly-born infant of Anne Ryan, another inmate of the house, on March 25th. The arrests followed upon evidence given in an inquest concluded at an early hour yesterday. Maud Huth and Sydney Manning, of 100 Victoria Lane, both swore that a girl named Smith, who lived at 52 Bond street, had told them of the birth of Anne Ryan's child, and said that she had seen Mrs. Baldwin, the head of the house, stick her fingers down the infant's throat until it choked to death. The child, she said, made a noise, but did not actually cry out. Miss Smith, who said she was a waitress from Lindsay, denied on oath all the statements of the precuous witnesses, except that she had teld them of the baby's birth. Mrs. Emily Baldwin also denied that she had told them of the baby's birth. Mrs. Emily Baldwin also denied that she had injured the child. Before giving evidence she was warned that she was said to have caused the death of the infant, and that she could not be compelled to speak, but she answered, "I'll testify." She swore that the baby was alive when she retired for the night, and that it was dead in the morning.
