

How Red Rose Tea is Grown

TEA is a native plant of Northern India. Transplanted to Ceylon it lost much of its strength and richness, but gained in fragrance and delicacy. That is why Ceylon tea is not a strong tea.

That is why I blend Indian and Ceylon teas together—that is how the strength and richness, fragrance and delicacy of Red Rose Tea are secured—that is why Red Rose Tea has that "rich fruity flavor."

The LUST of HATE

BY GUY BOOTHBY

Author of "A Beautiful White Devil," "A Bid For Fortune," "The Marriage of Esther," "Dr. Nikola," Etc.

"It's not a common name," continued the skipper; "that is why I ask. Sir George Wrexford is one of our directors, and a splendid fellow. I thought it was just possible that you might be some connection of his. Now, if you will excuse me, I'll be off. Take my advice and turn in early. I'm sorry to say we're carrying our full complement of passengers, so that I cannot give you a proper berth; but I've ordered a bed to be made up for you in my chart-room, where you have been all day to-day. If you can manage to make yourself comfortable there it is quite at your service."

"It is very kind of you to put your self to so much inconvenience," I answered. "I fear by the time we reach Cape Town I shall have caused you a considerable amount of trouble."

"Not at all! Not at all!" the hospitable skipper replied, as he rose to go. "I'm only too glad to have picked you up. It's our duty to do what we can for each other, for we none of us know when we may be placed in a similar plight ourselves."

"Still, progressing satisfactorily," he answered. "She bids me give you her kind regards. She has been most constant in her enquiries after your welfare."

"I don't know whether my face revealed my secret, or whether it was only supposition on his part, but he looked at me pretty hard for a moment, and then laughed outright."

"You may not know it," he said, "but when all's said and done, you're a jolly lucky fellow."

I sighed, and hesitated a moment before I replied. "I'm afraid you're mistaken," I said. "Luck and I have never been companions. I doubt if there is a man in this world who has more of the more devoid of good fortune than mine. As a boy, I was unlucky in everything I undertook. If I played cricket, I was always either bowled for a duck's egg, or run out just as I was beginning to score. If I was in an accident in the football field, when I was playing, I was invariably the sufferer. I left Oxford under a cloud, because I could not explain something that I knew to be a mistake on the part of the authorities. I quarrelled with my family on the same misunderstanding. I was once on the verge of becoming a millionaire, but illness prevented my taking advantage of my opportunity; and while I was thus delayed another man stepped in and forestalled me. I had a legacy, but it brought me nothing but ill-luck, and has finally driven me out of England."

"And since then, the tide of ill-fortune has turned," he said. "A beautiful and wealthy girl falls overboard—you dive in, and rescue her. I have heard about that, you see. The ship you are traveling by goes to the bottom—you save your own life, and the same girl's life. Then, as if that is not enough, you try your luck a third time; and, just as a terrible fate seems to be going to settle you for good and all, we heave in sight and rescue you. Now, when I think of Miss Maybourne's gratitude, which would strike most men as a more than desirable possession, and at the same time you will have her father's."

"And, just as the peculiar irony of fate, both come to me, when I am quite powerless to take advantage of them."

"Come, come, you mustn't let yourself down like this. You know very well what the end of it all will be, if you spend your life believing yourself to be a marked man."

"You mean that I shall lose my reason? No, no! you needn't be afraid of that. I come of a hard-headed race that I know to be in the habit of stocking asylums."

"I am glad of that. Now what do you say to getting up? I'll have your breakfast sent to you in here, and after you've eaten it, I'll introduce you to some of the passengers. On the whole, they are a nice lot, and very much interested in my two patients."

I thanked him, and, to show how very much better I felt, sprang out of bed and began to dress. True to his promise, my breakfast was brought to me by a steward, and I partook of it on the chart-room table. Just as I finished the doctor reappeared, and after a little conversation, we left the cabin and proceeded out on to the deck together. Here we found the majority of the passengers promenading, or seated in the chairs. Among them I noticed two clergymen, two or three elderly gentlemen of the colonial merchant type, a couple of dapper young fellows whom I set down in my own mind as belonging to the military profession, the usual number of elderly ladies, half a dozen younger ones, of more or less fascinating appearances, and the same number of children. As soon as they saw me several of those seated rose and came to meet us. The doctor performed the necessary introductions, and in a few minutes I found myself seated in a comfortable deck-chair receiving innumerable congratulations on my recovery. Strange to say, I did not dislike their sympathy as much as I had imagined I should do. There was something so spontaneous and unaffected about it that I would have been glad to have picked you up. It's our duty to do what we can for each other, for we none of us know when we may be placed in a similar plight ourselves."

Samaria Stopped His Drinking

A London Lady cures her husband permanently of the drink habit and without his knowledge.

"How glad I am that I overcame my hesitation about writing you for a Free Sample of Samaria. At that time my husband was drinking very hard, and was in despair. The effect of your treatment was immediate, and now our home is entirely free from the drink curse. I gave my husband the tablets in his bed, and he never knew. As the taste general health improved and is now splendid. I will tell others of my experience."

After he left me, I was not long in following the good advice he had given me; and when I had once reached my couch, fell into a dreamless sleep, from which I did not wake until eight o'clock next morning. Indeed, I don't know that I should have disturbed even then, had I not been disturbed by the noise made by someone entering the cabin. It proved to be the doctor.

"How are you feeling this morning?" he asked, when he had felt my pulse.

"Ever so much better," I replied. "In fact, I think I'm quite myself again. How is Miss Maybourne?"

"Still progressing satisfactorily," he answered. "She bids me give you her kind regards. She has been most constant in her enquiries after your welfare."

"I don't know whether my face revealed my secret, or whether it was only supposition on his part, but he looked at me pretty hard for a moment, and then laughed outright."

FASHION'S EDICTS.

Novelties in Neckwear—The Princess Model Very Fashionable.

To make a gown becoming there must be plenty of white around the neck in the form of lace, muslin or chiffon. Irish point and many creamy soft stuffs are used for chemisettes. Stiff linen collars are very smart with tailor-made gowns, but women past their first youth should be careful how they wear these trying effects. The bows to be worn with linen collars are of microscopic size and are made by taking the ribbon over the top of the collar band so that it shows between the turnover division and then making a bow so small that it will barely tie.

A series of tiny bows gradually diminishing in size connected with links of ribbon is a pretty neck trimming. They are made upon a little crotchet foundation and pinned on separately.

The princess gown is undoubtedly the most fashionable model of the season, and so cleverly are materials manufactured that this dress, with its long, graceful lines, can be made becoming to almost every figure.

The evening gown in the picture is of black chiffon. The skirt is elaborately trimmed with applications of lace edged with satin quiltings. The low bodice has the same inset just above the waist line and about the full puffed sleeves. A girle of black panne velvet encircles the waist.

FORECAST OF THE MODE.

Becoming Rain Coats—Hand Painted Belts—Popularity of Boleros.

The new rain coat is not, as was the old one, of somber and unbecoming hue. The richest colors distinguish many of these useful coats. Instead of the former plain surfaces there are hair stripes, little checks and fancy plaids. The buttons of such coats are made of the same material and are very small. Except in a modest trio upon the sleeve, perhaps, they are often not seen at all, for a number of the single breasted coats close with fly fronts.

Among the more expensive novelties of the season are hand painted velvet belts, which are exceedingly effective. A charming combination was recently displayed consisting of a short coat of chinchilla drawn in at the waist with a broad belt of pale gray chiffon velvet, adorned with a beautiful hand painted design of pale blue and pink forget-me-nots.

The popularity of the bolero is undoubtedly due to the fact that it can always be made to look charming. Some of the latest boleros are more like short coats, while others are little more than a deep yoke or fichu. For gowns the bolero is the most useful garment, the coat being left for the tailor made suits. This small bolero comes to a finish just under the arms, meeting across the front or not, according to the trimming of the bolero.

The waist illustrated is a simple and attractive design. Over the lace yoke and narrow vest is a fanciful arrangement of silk braid. The sleeves have deep lace cuffs trimmed with rows of braid.

OPERATIONS AVOIDED

Two Grateful Letters from Women Who Avoided Serious Operations.—Many Women Suffering from Like Conditions Will Be Interested.

When a physician tells a woman, suffering from ovarian or womb trouble, that an operation is necessary it, of course, frightens her. The very thought of the operating table and the knife strikes terror to her heart. As one woman expressed it, when told by her physician that she must undergo an operation, she felt that her death knell had sounded. Our hospitals are full of women who are there for ovarian or womb operations!

It is quite true that these troubles may reach a stage where an operation is the only resource, but such cases are much rarer than is generally supposed, because a great many women have been cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound after the doctors had said an operation must be performed. In fact, up to the point where the knife must be used to secure instant relief, this medicine is certain to help.

The strongest and most grateful statements possible to make come from women who, by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, have escaped serious operations.

Mrs. Robert Glenn of 434 Marie St., Ottawa, Ont., writes: "Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is so well and wisely known that it does not need my recommendation, but I am pleased to add it to the many which you have in its favor. I have suffered untold agonies from ovarian troubles for nearly three years, and the doctors told me that I must undergo an operation, but as I was unwilling to do this, I tried your Vegetable Compound, and King has completed the 2nd concession Blind Line drain, a very large ditch on which he has been engaged for some months. Mrs. Stevenson, who has been visiting her cousin, Mrs. Albert Wills, has returned to her home in Cleveland, Ohio. H. Oliphant is suffering from an attack of bronchitis. Benjamin Moulton sold a couple of fine beavers to R. Farworth, the Dresden butcher, on Monday. The mildest January weather even our "oldest inhabitant" ever remembers prevails. A frog's orchestra sang on two evenings last week. Alas, how great the number of people who have existed without having lived. A pointed house doesn't show its age, but it's different with a woman.

Mrs. James Karr received the sad intelligence of the death of her sister.
