Legal Decisions.

1. Any person who takes a paper regularly from the Post Office—whether directed to his name or another's or whether he has subscribed or not—is responsible for the payment. 2. If a person orders his paper discontinued, he must pay up all arrears, or the publisher may continue to send it until payment is made, and collect the whole amount, whether the paper is taken from the office or not. 3. The courts have decided that refusing to take newspapers and periodicals from the Post Office, or removing and leaving them uncollected for several days, is prima facie evidence of intentional fraud.

POETRY.

The Anvil.

Many hours have I stood watching By the village blacksmith's anvil, Where upon the glowing metal Dealt he blow on blow like rain Forging bolt or bar or horseshoe, Turning sharp or pruned sickle, Or a link for some great chain. How the sparks at each concussion Flew in bright and burning showers, As the hammer, merrily ringing, Fell, and rose to fall again! Wide beneath the fall he cast Sturdy, strong and firmly seated, Never seemed to heed the strain. Many men have I seen standing Sturdy, strong and firmly anchored, While upon them, like the anvil, Fell the blows of fate amain! Turned they not from searching sorrow Nor the very king of terrors, Proudly steadfast true in manhood, Showed not where a blow had lain.—Edwin Ralph Collins, in Texas Siftings.

SELECT STORY.

Mrs Pauling Thinks.

I wonder why some will never marry the girls their mothers pick out for them. The perversity of human nature, I suppose. But it seems to me that if any one pointed out the proper line of conduct to me I would follow it.

I had never much of a fancy for Gerarda Abbey. Her lips and cheeks always seemed to me too bright and colored and her dark hair curled and flew about so. And then her eyes danced and shone in a totally undignified manner.

"Tom," I used to say at least once a week, "I wonder you don't admire Margie Hoffheimer. She has such dignity, such repose of manner."

"So has an iceberg—and an oyster," Tom would retort.

"Well! the young men of the present day have strange taste. She is just my ideal of a woman. She never covers her forehead with foolish bangs and frizzes."

"Pity she doesn't!" said Tom. "It has such a lumpy look."

Tom is my only child. I love him dearly, but he has always been a great weight on my mind. For instance, in spite of all my entreaties he would go to Fairview to settle, through every one said there was a fine opening at home, in Paschal, when old Dr. Johns died. What a dear, good old man he was—but somehow he never came to see me professionally that he did not make me sicker than ever.

I told him so once, and he did not take it in good part at all.

Strange how few people can bear to hear the truth.

Well, as I was saying, Tom would admire Gerarda and wouldn't admire Margie. Now I am not mercenary, but I do think it is better for a young professional man to marry a girl with a nice little fortune of her own than one with a widowed mother and five younger sisters and brothers, and just enough to get along on.

"You'll never succeed, Tom," I cried in a pet, "if you marry a girl with a pack of mothers and sister clinging to her skirts."

"Strictly speaking," said Tom in his provoking way, "Mrs Abbey can't be called a pack of mothers."

"Oh, you know perfectly well what I mean; but have your own way as usual."

Of course I had to call on the girl since she and Tom were engaged. The little house where they lived was always as neat as a pin. I must say, and Gerarda was the mainstay of the family.

I was polite, but not at all cordial. I am too truthful to assume anything I feel. I told her I thought she would look better with her hair brushed back from her forehead. She colored but answered very pleasantly that "Tom liked it best so."

This happened during one of Tom's visits home. He never stayed long, and I used to tell him it looked as if I did not make him comfortable. Well, I did not see much of Gerarda that fall, though we used to pay each other daily calls now and then, and when winter set in I heard of a queer crack of hers.

She had opened a dancing school. Now there seems to be something very bold and unfeminine about teaching a dancing school. One always thinks a woman ought to support herself by some other means.

"Oh, don't!" she cried.

K. D. C. is Guaranteed

teaching music or embroidery or painting plaques. To be sure Gerarda did not know how to play or paint, never having had much time for accomplishments, I fancy.

I couldn't understand it at all for the Abbess had always got along so far, and it was particularly odd when Morton, the oldest boy, had been given a place in a commission house in Cincinnati by an uncle or cousin or some thing of that sort. I began to think she must have done it out of sheer light-headedness and frivolity.

I wrote to Tom, hoping he might remonstrate with her. I am always moderate in the expression of my opinion so I simply said:

"Gerarda is looking very badly. All this dancing and racketing around is not good for her. But the young people of the present day have no discretion. Modesty seems to have gone out of date along with veneration for their elders."

That was all I said.

But it seemed to have no effect, for Gerarda still went on teaching. She began to look worse and worse. All the color left her face; even her lips were pale, and her mouth got a pinched look. Then she got a hacking cough and I used to hear her going coughing along the street from her dancing school. She had not been to see me for the longest time—treating me with marked disrespect. But at last I could not bear to hear her, so I just ran out to the gate and gave her a box of lozenges.

She thanked me; then she gave me a wistful sort of look and hesitated, as if she wanted to say something; but she evidently changed her mind, for she passed on.

One day I was walking along the beach. Winter was beginning to break up, and were bright patches of green to be seen here and there. The sky was blue and white with flying clouds, and the water around the pier was shining in the sun. Everything looked so peaceful and happy that I couldn't help wondering why people can't be so peaceful and happy, too, and follow the golden rule.

I had had a very trying morning. In the first place I had been to see Mrs. Jones. When I went into the sitting room there was a fire crackling on the hearth, and I could see through the door that there was one burning in her room also. Now, as Mrs. Jones is poor, and as I had supplied her with food for the greater part of the winter I thought I had a right to say:

"Dear me, Mrs. Jones, I shouldn't think you could afford to have two fires burning at once—and such a mild day, too."

She turned as red as a beet and prosed her lips together, but she didn't say anything. I fear Mrs. Jones is far from being sweet tempered.

Then I went on to sister Harriet's. Her daughter Ella had just met with quite a severe accident, having been thrown from a buggy while out driving, and her arm broken. To be sure she was painful and the shock had made her ill, but then she shouldn't have been so foolish as to have gone out to behold Ned Pennywick's young horse. I reminded her of this.

"You ought to be very thankful," I began.

"Thankful for having been nearly killed?" she cried. "Really, Aunt Maria, my gratitude is not so easily aroused."

I set down on the bed beside her. Perhaps I may have drawn the cover rather tightly over her feet, but she need not have given such a frown. "My dear child, it might have been your back or your neck," I said.

"Well, it wasn't."

"But it might have been."

"Maria," said my sister at this point "too much conversation is not good for Ella. The doctor says it makes her feverish."

"So I left there and went to Mrs. Crittenden's. She was in great trouble. She and her husband had not been married long, but they had had heavy money losses, and he had been obliged to leave her with her mother while he went out west to seek employment. I had brought her some winejelly, and after I had given it to her I said:

"Cheer up, my dear. It might be so much worse. Suppose he was dead?"

"Oh, don't!" she cried.

To Cure DYSPEPSIA AND INDIGESTION.

"Well, but it might have happened. In the midst of life we are in death, and think how dreadful it would have been to see him lying in his coffin instead of his being just out west, where you can hear from him twice a week. Does he write twice a week?"

"Only once," she said.

"Only once—dear, dear!" said I. "I should think he'd write oftener."

"He's too busy," she replied.

Then to divert her mind from her own grievances I began to tell her about my new household, Gerarda, and how many things she had broken in the past week.

"Three saucers and a teacup—no, three teacups and a saucer, I was saying, when I happened to glance at her and saw that she was not listening to a word I was saying.

She seemed to be a poor, spiritless creature, and I made up my mind that I would not go to see her again in a hurry.

Indeed I came to the conclusion that there is very little gratitude in the world. You can go around wearing yourselves out trying to do good to others and never get a word of thanks.

I thought I would go on to Mrs. Stone's, as she had asked the ladies of the church to meet at her house and talk over the new altar cloth. When I stepped upon the gallery the front door was ajar, and a sound of voices came from the parlor; but no one seemed to hear my knock. I paused a moment, when my attention was attracted by the following remark:

"Mrs. Pauling is one of those people who are moral fly-blisters to all their friends and acquaintances."

"Yes," said another voice—it was that deceitful Margie Hoffheimer—"I always think it was fortunate for Job's reputation for patience that he did not know her."

"And the worst of it is that she has a good heart and one can't quite hate her."

"You are right," replied Gerarda Abbey's voice. "Mrs. Pauling has one of the best hearts in the world. I know of ever so many sacrifices she has made in order to help others."

"Well, I should think you would be the last!"

But I did not wait to hear more. I was so angry that I did not know exactly where I was going when I walked away. To think that Gerarda's voice was the only one raised in my defence after the way I had always snubbed her! I felt heartily ashamed of myself. As I was hurrying along who should overtake me but Gerarda. She bowed and was going to pass on, but I said, "Your cold doesn't seem to get any better, my dear."

She looked surprised and her lip trembled; then she answered bravely, "Oh, now spring is coming it will soon be well."

"Not unless you take care of yourself. You ought to get Tom to prescribe for you."

She hung her head and murmured something that sounded like, "Tom doesn't care."

I asked what she meant and she answered: "Tom and I are not engaged any longer. I did not write to him that I had undertaken the dancing school, for fear he would say the work was too hard for me. But someone else must have told him, for he wrote me such a strange letter—that I could not care for him much if I was able to dance and enjoy myself in his absence. I am ashamed of my doing such a thing, and I have always felt that we ought to be doubly proud because we are poor. So matters went on from bad to worse until our engagement was broken off."

"But, dear, why did you teach?"

"Why, you see, we had so much expense in fitting Morton out for Cincinnati, and then Jenny's long spell of typhoid got us into debt. I don't know how to do anything but dance, and it was my only chance to earn money. But I never thought Tom would be ashamed of anything I did."

A sudden idea struck me and took away my breath.

"Well, Gerarda, if you have never hated me before I am afraid you will hate me now," I said, and remembering the allusion I made to her dancing, which Tom's jealousy had clearly mis### understood. I told her the whole story, and said I would write to him immediately.

"But suppose he's fallen in love with some other girl in the meantime," said Gerarda with a sob.

"Bless you!" said I, "he hasn't done that—of course not! He is too much the son of his mother to change his mind in a hurry. You'll see him in Paschal before the end of the week." So I walked to the gate and left her comforted.

When I reached home I dispatched a hasty note to Tom saying that a patient in Paschal needed his immediate attention, and this brought him on the wings of the wind.

When I had made the necessary explanation he gave me a hearty hug and then rushed off to see Gerarda.

Of course they kissed and made friends.

In fact, they have been married since last evening, and I am as fond of Gerarda as if she were my own daughter—the only drawback being that they are so far away.

I wanted Tom to come back to Paschal and then we could all have lived together in the same house and been so happy. I can't think why he would not do it.

The Lemon's Many Virtues.

The number of curative properties attributed in recent years to the lemon is large. Here are some of them which an eminent physician is said to have enumerated: Lemonade made from the juice of the lemon is one of the best and safest drinks for any person, whether in health or not. It is suitable for all stomach diseases, excellent in sickness in cases of jaundice, gravel, liver complaints. Lemon juice is the best antiscorbutic remedy known. It not only cures the disease, but prevents it. Sailors make daily use of it for this purpose. We would advise everyone to rub their gums with lemon juice to keep them in a healthy condition. The hands and nails are also kept clean, white, soft and supple by the daily use of lemon instead of soap. It always prevents chills. Lemon is used in intermittent fevers, mixed with strong, hot, black coffee, without sugar. Neuralgia, it is said, may be cured by rubbing the part affected with a cut lemon. It is valuable to cure warts. It will remove dandruff by rubbing the roots of the hair with it. It will alleviate and finally cure coughs and colds and heat diseased lungs if taken hot on going to bed.

The True Crank.

The true charm of the word crank is the same as the true charm of the crank himself, its adaptability to meanings and uses exactly opposite to those usually associated with it. Crank is not always infirm; crank is always brisk and lively; a crank may be cranky in two ways, as most persons who have dealings with the genus have easily noted. Crankiness or crankness in any sense of either word is a useful quality to have on hand and on demand. The true crank may be a crazy headed creature and a great bore to all his collateral acquaintance, or he may be a light hearted and soulful soul who delights all his responsible associates with his irresponsible and amiable irrelevance. He is more typical of Boston than the overworked bean; he is the national flower of a highly conscientious civilization.

Do It Now.

Every winter many farmers inwardly resolve on the necessity of windbreaks and purpose planting them when the spring opens. They mostly forget the matter then, and so the unprotected house or outbuildings goes from year to year with less comfort to man and beast than there might be. Make the needed memorandum now, and locate the places where the fiercest and coldest winds come to house or barn. It can be better done now than in the spring. Do not try to plant large trees, so as to have a protection at once. Rather buy a large number of small trees, and make a double row of them, which with evergreen makes as good protection as can be desired.

Dropped on sugar, children love to take Johnson's Anodyne Liniment for coughs and colds.

A Great Event

In one's life is the discovery of a remedy for some long-standing malady. The poison of scrofula is in your blood. You inherited it from your ancestors. Will you transmit it to your offspring? In the great majority of cases, both Consumption and Catarrh originate in Scrofula. It is supposed to be the primary source of many other derangements of the body. Begin at once to cleanse your blood with the standard alternative.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

"For several months I was troubled with scrofulous eruptions over the whole body. My appetite was bad, and my system so prostrated that I was unable to work. After trying several remedies in vain, I resorted to Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and did so with such good effect that less than one bottle restored my health and strength. The rapidity of the cure astonished me, as I expected the process to be long and tedious."—Frederic Martz Fernandes, Villa Nova de Gays, Portugal.

Restored My Health

"For many years I was a sufferer from scrofula, until about three years ago, when I began the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, since which the disease has entirely disappeared. A little child of mine, who was troubled with the same complaint, has also been cured by this medicine."—H. Brandt, Avoca, Neb.
