 In a letter from Mr. H. Kenneth Lea, received by THE ACADIAN this week, he says: "You may be interested to hear that there has been no snow in England for two winters, in succession, this winter, and last winter, and that seven degrees of frost (i. e. a temperature of 25 degrees C.) is the greatest cold experienced in these two winters. Of course I am speaking for the southern half of the British Isles. Primroses, violets and snowdrops are now in bloom (March 14th) in the woods and hedges, and there is quite a crop of grass on the meadows." Mr. Lea, who has been spending the winter at his old home, expects to return to Nova Scotia in a few weeks.
