What Good is the Robin.
"Now, what good is the robin? Everybody knows the robin. A boy came along the road with a 22 rifle, saw a robin sitting there and killed it. I went over and picked up the robin. Two cat-worms were squirming on the ground; the robin had had them in his beak. I held the bird up and two more fell out of his mouth. Remember, one cat-worm will eat your face, another will eat your eyes, the rest will eat your insides under the soil; Mr. Robin comes hopping along, gets in there and pulls them out, and turns them into a robin. If anyone told you a robin will destroy one hundred cat worms in a day, take it from him that it is true."
Mrs. Ormond was very busy with several guests, and little Austin was sitting by his father, who decided to take the boy to Sunday School. It was quite a little walk, and Mr. Ormond endeavored to improve the time by teaching Austin the Golden Text, the words of which were, "Whatever a man soweth, that shall he also reap."
Austin repeated it obediently after his father several times, and seemed to have mastered the correct wording. During the Sunday School exercises the teacher turned to Austin and said:
"Now let me hear if you can say the Golden Text."
Mr. Ormond, who was seated near by, heard the question and listened attentively to his son's answer.
Austin hesitated for a moment and then answered: "Whatever a man sows always ripens."
Mail received from Battle Harbor, Labrador, and other points states that the Arctic coast is being ravaged by influenza and smallpox during the winter and that the entire population of one village, Ouk, was wiped out. ## Talking Across the Seas.

The rapid development of the wireless telephone has been one of the remarkable features of the year. It was still in the experimental stage in 1914. When the airplane began to be used largely for reconnaissance and for directing artillery fire the demand for some easier and more flexible mode of communication than wireless telegraphy became urgent. British inventors responded eagerly and the wireless apparatus of 1914 became rapidly perfected so that it could be used for speaking between ships and land stations up to fifteen miles and beyond.

Wireless telephony has now crossed the Atlantic in advance of the airship or the airplane. Words have been wafted from Washington to the Eiffel Tower, Paris, and only the other day a conversation was held between Ireland and Nova Scotia. A leading British man of science, Mr. Campbell Swinton, F. R. S., predicts that a speech delivered in London may be heard simultaneously in Calcutta, Cairo, Paris, Petrograd, New York and on vessels in mid ocean, and that by the use of loud speaking telephones large audiences may listen to the transmitted tones as if they were being addressed by the original speaker. The invention opens up interesting possibilities. Some day Canadian auditors may listen to speeches by Lloyd George or other British orators concurrently with their delivery. They may even hear the debates at Westminster, Washington or Ottawa. Whether in all cases this would be an unqualified pleasure or profit is a matter for conjecture. "Look at that fool throwing away his natural advantages," said Robert Lowe, pointing to a fellow Commoner who used an ear trumpet.

Prussia's huge losses in officers and men during the war are indicated by a staff officer who writes in the Lokal Anzeiger. He submits figures compiled from the official casualty lists to show that 32,454 active officers at the front were killed, wounded or missing out of a total of 34,350, and that more than a 3,500,000 soldiers were killed, wounded or missing out of 10,178,000 who actually fought at the front.

Newfoundland has been characterized as a nation of fishermen. Out of an entire population of a quarter of a million nearly 70,000 are engaged in catching and curing fish. Even before the recent rise in fish the annual export from Newfoundland totalled over ten million dollars. At the beginning of the seventeenth century 300 English vessels employing 10,000 men and boys were engaged in fishing on the coast of the ancient colony.

At the time Michigan went dry a Detroit newspaper man put six thousand bottles of beer away in his cellar as a reserve in case of sickness. But the police raided the place and the liquor was seized. The publisher then had recourse to the law, and now the Circuit Court has ordered the beer returned. The judge holds that the authorities had no right to invade a man's home in quest of contraband. Newspaper men who have six thousand bottles of beer in the family cellar will rejoice at this vindication of their rights.

Prohibition in Cape Breton (North Sydney Herald.)
It is marvellous where all the booze comes from. There is scarcely a day passes but quantities of it fall into the hands of the inspectors. The fact that so much of the stuff has been seized proves conclusively that prohibition so far has not proved a success. Time was when an inspector felt justified when he correlated a bottle or two in order to secure a conviction against some blundering runner; but now it is quite common to log four or five thousand dollars worth of liquor off to the strong rooms. Friday night Deputy Inspector Lamson who has just returned from the southern colonies where he landed a cartload or two into custody, seized a couple of barrels of forty over-proof rum. He got wind that a shipment was landed in the vicinity of Florence, and acting on instructions from the other end, lay in wait until darkness, when he apprehended a teamster half way between here and Florence with two casks. The latter, in a reclining posture, was taken against the Florence teamster, which will be followed by the destruction of the valuable prize.

Mother Goose Rhymes Over 200 Years Old.

This year, 1919, teemeth with centennials and anniversaries, marks also the 200th anniversary of Mother Goose rhymes. The first book of the nursery rhymes, which for generations have been treasured by all the little children was printed in 1719 by Thomas Fleet, a Boston publisher who intended only to ridicule the author of the verses.

Mother Goose, to the story goes, was the mother-in-law of Pict and the rhymes she composed, were made up for the delight of her infant grandson. The practical minded Boston printer worried of the grandmother's ceaseless chattering, and when she refused to be silenced Fleet determined to punish her by letting the world read her silly verses and laugh at her. So each evening he secretly listened to the songs, wrote them down and made them into a little book which he called, Songs for the Nursery, or Mother Goose's Melodies for Children.

History does not tell whether Grandmother Goose was annoyed by the publicity she received, but it is certain that the publisher was satisfied at the result of his scheme for revenge. Instead of making his mother-in-law an object of ridicule, he provided her with such enduring fame that by many she is considered a legendary character, an American myth.

Practically all the shingle mills in British Columbia are closed down because of the employees refusing to accept a cut of 10 per cent. in wages.

Keep Electric Lamps Clean

Dirty electric lamps are inefficient and wasteful. A recent investigation in a large establishment disclosed interesting figures in the extent of this waste. A group of lamps with a week's accumulation of dirt showed an average absorption of light of 15 per cent. some of these running as high as nearly 50 per cent. Another group which had been used for three weeks had an average absorption of 25 per cent. with a maximum of over 50 per cent. Figuring on this basis, 15 per cent. more lamps at the end of one week, or 25 per cent. at the end of three weeks, would be required to obtain the same illumination that would have been obtained if the lamps were kept clean. This, of course, meant a corresponding increase in the electric light bill—L. G. D.

"I don't think I can go, Jessie, for I just feel wretched"
"Oh, I'm so sorry, for I did so want you to be there."
"I hate to disappoint you, dear, but you know how miserable I have been lately."
"Yes, but I thought you were better."
"So I am some days, and then I just seem to be as bad as ever again. I get so weak that I do not feel able to stir."
"What is the trouble?"
"The doctor says I am anemic. He says the blood is thin and watery, and I do not get the good of the food I eat. Goodness knows I do not eat much, either, for I have no appetite."
"Why not try Dr. Chase's Nerve Food?"
"Would that help me, do you think?"
"I do not see why it should not. You remember how pale and weak I used to be. Well, it was nothing else than Dr. Chase's Nerve Food that cured me. And I am not looking as though I needed any medicine now, am I?"
"If I could only be strong and healthy like you are, Jessie, I would give anything."
"You never will be unless you try, and I do not think you would be disappointed with Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. It is not only my case, but there are so many other girls we know who have been benefited by it."
"Will you get me a box at the drug store, Jessie, and I will start right in to-day? If this will only give me an appetite and make the blood rich and red, so that I can get some strength and color, I will be a happy girl."
Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is so gentle in action, and yet so potent as a restorative, that it is a great favorite with women of all ages. It seems to be admirably suited to the needs of their delicate nervous systems, and on this account it has come to be universally used as a means of restoring vigor and energy to a rundown, nervous system. 50 cents a box, 6 for $2.75, all dealers, or Edmondson, Babes & Co., Ltd., Toronto. On every box of the genuine you will find the portrait and signature of A. W. Chase, M.D., the famous Receipt Book author.
