Cantankerous Obstinate Watches.

If you are the owner of a cantankerous, obstinate Watch, that utterly refuses to behave itself decently and tell time correctly, why not bring it to the

and let our expert repairers diagnose its case? An erratic unreliable Watch is little better than no Watch at all. The longer you allow it to misbehave the more difficult the repairer's task will be in the end and the greater the cost of repair. Putting off the fixing of a Watch or Clock that has gotten out of order is a losing and shortsighted policy. Has this any home application to any of your timepieces? If so our Repair Department is ready and waiting.

A Magnate's Confession

(Washington Star)

Down by the livery stable, on a sultry summer day, Cy Jones got out the checker board challenged me to play, I thought I stood a chance, for I had watched the game a bit; But he started for my king row. I was vanquish when he lit. And everybody laughed and said I had myself to blame For thinking that Cy Jones would let me beat him in the game.

That's my earliest disappointment. It embittered my career I went and got a book and settled down to work severe. I beat some other players, and then as time went by I thought that maybe I was strong enough to tackle Cy. But my well-laid calculation seemed to falter and go lame— Cy let me take a man, and then jumped three and won the game.

As years went by I had some luck and prospered more or less and yet there's just one little thing that spoils my whole success. I know that I am envied as a most sagacious man, Likewise admired or hated for the way that I can plan, Cy hasn't made much money—but I know that just the same If ever we play checkers he will beat me at the game.

Hagard's Yellow Oil can be applied externally for rheumatism, stiff joints, chapped hands, chilblains, sprains, etc. It can be taken internally for croup, quinsy, bronchitis, pains in the stomach, kidney complaint, etc. Price 25c.

Boston girls have broken the record for high jumping. Must have been an extra large sized mouse.

Minard's Liniment cures Diphtheria.

After a bachelor has passed through a corset factory, he never has the same confidence in womankind. It makes him cynical and convinces him that life is a hollow show.

If a child eats ravenously, grinds the teeth at night and picks its nose, you may almost be certain it has worms and should administer without delay Dr. Low's Pleasant Worm Syrup this remedy contains its own cathartic.

This weather is liable to make the house cleaning microbes get on the rampage to an even worse extent than ever.

At the Yarmouth Y. M. C. A. Boys' Camp held at Tuskat Falls in August, I found MINARD'S LINIMENT most beneficial for sun burn an immediate relief for colic and toothache.

KIDNEY TROUBLE

CURED BY

DOAN'S KIDNEY PILLS.

Kidney Troubles, no matter of what kind or what stage of the disease, can be quickly and permanently cured by the use of these wonderful pills. Mr. Joseph Leland, Alma, N.W.T., recommends them to all kidney trouble sufferers, when he says:—I was troubled with dull headaches, had frightful dreams, terrible pains in my legs and a frequent desire to urinate. Noticing DOAN'S KIDNEY PILLS recommended for just such annoyances as mine, it occurred to me to give them a trial, so I procured a box of them, and was very much surprised at the effectual cure they made. I take a great deal of pleasure in recommending them to all kidney trouble sufferers. Price 50c. per box, or 3 for $1.25; all dealers or The Doan Kidney Pill Co., Toronto, Ont.

Cardinal Moran, Archbishop of Sydney, on Sunday, April 17 consecrated the Right Rev. Dr. Olier, S. M., the new Coadjutor-Bishop of Tonga.

In St. Andrew's Cathedral, Glasgow, the other day, Archbishop Maguire ordained eight students to the priesthood, the largest number ordained at one time since the so-called Reformation.

Rev. Richard Baxter, S. J., who died recently in Montreal, Canada, aged 83, spent the greater part of his life at the Port William Mission to the conversion and welfare of the Indians.

The Very Rev. Hyacinth Cormier, O. P., has been elected master general of the Dominican order of the whole world. The new incumbent is a Frenchman, 173 years of age, and has been procurator general of the order for the past ten years.

The Minister of Agriculture of Argentina has authorized Rev. Father Iturralde, O. F. M., Apostolic Prefect of the Franciscan Missions of Formosa, in the Argentine Republic, to undertake an exploring expedition into Chaco, in order to bring its numberless indigenous tribes under the pale of civilization. These regions have never yet been explored.

Nuns of the Good Shepherd from the mother house in Angers, France, are now establishing a house in Johannesburg, South Africa. The little community consists of five religious. The selection of three names by the parish priests of the diocese of Killaloe for recommendation to the Holy See in connection with the forthcoming appointment of a successor to the late Dr. McRimmond took place May 17. Very Rev. M. Fogarty, vice president of the diocese, was dignissimus, with 23 votes; Most Rev. Dr. Kelly, Bishop of Ross dignior, with 17 votes, and the Very Rev. Dean White, P. P., Menagh, dignus, with 6 votes.

The following was the result of the meeting of the parish priests of the diocese of Kerry held at Killarney on May 19 for the selection of three names to be submitted to Rome with a view to the appointment of a successor to the late Bishop Coffey: Dignissimus, Very Rev. Canon O'Sullivan, P. P., Millstreet, 19 votes; Dignior, Van. Archbishop Mangan, P. P. V. G., Kenmare, 16 votes; Dignus, Very Rev. Canon O'Leary, P. P., Dingle, 5 votes.

Regarding cathedrals in Ireland, says Loucoa "Truth," Dublin is in the curious position as the capital of a Catholic country of not only possessing no Catholic cathedral, but of having two Protestant cathedrals, Land anti-Catholic writers on Ireland, to whom Bacon's dictum that writing makes an exact man can hardly be applied, find fault with and trace the country's failures to the over-zealous Catholic churches. The fact of the two Protestant cathedrals of Dublin escapes their notice, as well as the fact that the supply as regards congregations by no means demands so much accommodation. Neither do these writers record the undeniable fact that, however numerous the Catholic churches may be, they one and all have congregations to fill them.

Despite his recent election triumphs, the position of M. Combes is not all sunshine, remarks the London "Catholic Times." He has to watch clouds lowering overhead. There is still hanging over his son the accusation of taking money from the Catholics. The accuser, M. Joseph Besson, is not to appear before a jury for slander or libel; M. Combes has granted an amnesty for the whole affair! But M. Besson will not receive the proffered amnesty. He sustains the charge by repeating it, and dares M. Combes, Jr., to summon him before the courts. It will scarcely be possible even for the boldness of M. Combes to allow this public challenge to lie unanswered. The honor of his son touches his own very nearly indeed, for he owes his advancement to his father's position in the government. France is keenly interested about charges made against the honesty of her public officials, and for the sake of the country at large M. Combes will surely find it prudent to make his son take note of M. Besson's grave challenge. And then we may learn what manner of man these hunters of monks and nuns really are.

Alluding to a recent account, by Mr. George T. Angell of Boston, of the hearty co-operation in the work of preventing cruelty to animals which he receives from Catholics, the Catholic Columbian remarks: "Because the Catholic Church does not go to the extreme of teaching that the lower animals possess rights equal to and as sacred as the rights of man, there are many good people have little sympathy with movements intended to lessen cruelty to animals. Nothing could be more mistaken. Catholics, it is true, believe that it is a far more sacred duty to care for destitute children than destitute dogs or cats, and sokeance is a Frenchman, 173 years of age, and has been procurator general of the order for the past ten years.

The thrilling bit of fiction, representing Colonel Fanston in the act of swimming the dusty bed of the Rio Grande River in the face of a withering fire, is to be expunged from histories used in the Kansas public schools, remarks the Monitor.

"This is done at the order of the State Text-Book Commission, which states that its members 'are tired of seeing the misstatement paraded before the pupils of the Kansas high schools.' The Commission adds that an end is put to the story now, while there are men living in the State who know that it is not true." It took the Text-Book Commissioners a long time to discover what was known for years to most every newspaper reader in the country. But better late than never. Since it is alleged that Fanston's promotion to a brigadiership in the regular army was inspired by the same fictitious feat, it is up to President Roosevelt to follow the example of the Kansas censors and cancel the reward for heroics which never transpired except in the fertile fancy of Fanston's literary agent."

Rome, May 25.—The Vatican ought to be a place of turmoil and confusion these days, but it isn't. This morning's newspapers were particularly full of the situation between France and the Holy See, and Vox Urbis visited the immense edifice half with the expectation of finding everybody there rushing about frantically and asking what France was about to do next. Instead all was quiet. The Holy Father was receiving as usual; Cardinal Merry del Val passed by quietly conversing with a prelate the minor officials were engaged in their usual occupations just as if there were no fear in the world of a cataclysm. As a matter of fact, neither Pius X., nor Cardinal Merry del Val is in the least disturbed. They have shown that while the Holy See will never take the initiative in producing the suspension of diplomatic relations and the abrogation of the Concordat, it will not be altogether sorry when this happens.

Meanwhile the French ambassador left Rome last Saturday after some very strange manoeuvres, which he was compelled by the French Government to execute. On Friday last, he visited the Vatican twice. In the morning nothing particular happened. M. Nisard chatted with the other diplomats in the halls of the Sala Regia, and had a brief interview with the Cardinal. When he returned to his residence he found the telephone bell ringing furiously for him, and he found himself in communication with his own government in Paris. He was instructed to repair at once to the Vatican and demand from the Cardinal Secretary of State whether the famous document recently published by the Humanite of Paris contained the authentic text of the note sent to the other powers in connection with the visit of M. Loubet to Rome, and especially with regard to the passage in which it was stated that only very special reasons prevented the Holy See from recalling the nuncio from Paris. The Cardinal replied that if the ambassador would put his questions in writing, he would answer them immediately. Nisard said that time was pressing and M. Delcasse, the French Minister for Foreign Affairs, required an answer at once in order to be able to use it in the debate which was to take place that same day in the French Parliament. The Cardinal replied that the answer would be ready in an hour—in half an hour if necessary.

The ambassador urged that it was a very delicate question, and the Cardinal replied that for that very reason it was all the more necessary to have everything in black and white. Nisard continued to insist for a verbal answer, a mere "yes" or "no," and His Eminence simply said that he was sorry, but he could not give any other answer. Nisard is, however, a rather obturate kind of a man, and asked if he might conclude that the Holy See denied the authenticity of the document, and telegraph in that sense to Paris. Merry del Val very calmly told him that he had said nothing of the kind. The ambassador then seemed to give way to the very reasonable attitude of the Secretary of State.

At one point the questions in writing and he hoped that the answer would not be long in forthcoming. He went—and no more was heard of him. After two hours he was informed that the written questions were awaited, but the written questions did not come. Nisard had again telephoned to Paris, and had received word back that he was to take no further steps, but to leave Rome as soon as possible. Twenty-four hours later he had left the Eternal City, and all the anti-clerical press of Europe was dividing its space between shrieking denunciations of the Vatican and declaring that France had been insulted and must be avenged.

Next Friday the French Chamber of Deputies will debate what is to be done now, and next Monday the Italian Chamber of Deputies will have an opportunity of relieving its feeling on the whole subject.

One great fact emerges strikingly from all their hurly-burly. M. Loubet's visit to Rome was eagerly sought by the Italian Government as an evidence that the famous Roman Question was completely dead and buried—instead, it has served to give the most ringing kind of a proof that the Roman Question is still as burning as when the Piedmontese troops brutally and treacherously took possession of the Eternal City thirty-four years ago. Their presence here then was unjust and unlawful, and so it continues to-day. The incident is all the more significant under a peaceful and Apostolic Pontiff like Pius X. Everybody knows that he wishes to have as little as possible to do with political questions, and if he has been obliged to protest sternly against the visit of the President of the French Republic to King Victor Emmanuel, the reason is because, like Leo XIII., and Pius IX., he finds his position in Rome intolerable under present circumstances.

Attempts have been made to put all the responsibility of the present situation upon Cardinal Merry del Val. It is an old trick. During the life time of Leo XIII., it was the fashion for people to blame Cardinal Rampolla for everything in the policy of the Holy See that did not please them. The trick has failed to work in that case, and there is not the least likelihood that it will work in this. From the beginning to the end, the Holy Father himself has been the prime mover in the present incident. A few months ago, when it became certain that Loubet was definitely coming to Rome, Pius X., made the most careful inquiries as to what provision had been made for such an event during the reign of Pope Leo. There was not the least uncertainty about this. Cardinal Rampolla had already drawn up a form of protest which was to have been sent to France and the other powers—and this same protest it is, with some slight modification of the wording, which has been lately sent to France and the other powers. The confidence of Pius X., in Cardinal Merry del Val is unlimited in one way, for he knows that the Cardinal is absolutely devoted to him and to the Holy See. But on the other hand, neither Cardinal Merry del Val nor any other Cardinal is anything more than an instrument of Pius X., in the grave matters which vitally concern the Church. When the Cardinal visits His Holiness every morning and lays before him the business of the day, the Pope disposes in a few words of the unimportant matters. When the question is serious he sometimes asks the Cardinal for his opinion or for explanation, and invariably defers his decision for at least some hours. Once he has made up his mind, he never changes it—unless on the very gravest grounds. And the Cardinal on his side never takes a step of any importance without first submitting the matter to his Holiness. Hence his refusal to answer off-hand the French ambassador's questions last Friday. He wished to consult the Pope, and refused to say a word until he had done so.—Vox Urbis in N. Y. Freeman's Journals.
