Shedding Things.

By RUTH CAMERON.

"Wouldn't you and I shed things? That's the way to live, to shed things." He r-r-rick.

"I try to send something out of the house every week," a woman said to me the other day. "She had just given away to a circulating library a half-dozen novels with which her friends had provided her on the occasion of a trip abroad."

"Why should I keep them?" she says. "They are pleasant to read, but they are not books for reference or rereading. And as to the feelings of those who gave them to me, I know they would be glad to know that they had enjoyed them myself. I have passed them on to others who will also enjoy them."

To Be Taken Out Only For The Semi-Annual Cleaning.

That is eminently sensible, isn't it? And yet, how many of us from conventional inertia would have put away the books and left them indefinitely to lumber our shelves and be taken out and dusted at house-cleaning time.

How most of us do permit our lives to get cluttered up with the paraphernalia of living!

We really need, even for civilized living, so few things, and we have so many. The clothes we actually wear, utilitarian furniture (and about half as much as the average person has), perhaps one piece of beautiful bric-a-brac per room, the books we want for reference or rereading—that's about all we need. If we could only keep our possessions down to that, how much simpler life would be!

How She Keeps Her Possessions Down.

I love this woman's rule of something sent out of the house every week. Count that week lost whose seven days are spent and from thy house no needless object sent—with apologies to the copy book.

One of the many methods by which she keeps her possessions down is to have an arrangement with a charitable agency to call once a week for her magazines and newspapers. Another is to go over her clothing four times a year thoroughly and give away the things she doesn't need, instead of putting them away.

The way those who have hang on to what they have on the bare chance of wanting to use it is one of the most shameful results of our inherited mania for acquisition and possession. I pater particularly to the way we let a garment hang in the closet for a whole season simply because we can't make up our minds to give it away.

Why Shouldn't Someone Who Would Use It Have It?

Another woman showed me a perfectly good suit one day, not much worn and in not 'half bad style. "You're not going to give that away!" said her mother in horror.

"Yes," she said, "I am. I know I wouldn't wear it a half-dozen times, and those half-dozen times I could perfectly well wear something else."

Why shouldn't someone who could use it steadily have it before it has gone completely out of style?

Why, indeed? Besides, think of the extra hook and hanger she will have when she gets rid of that suit.

Most of us don't have room in our homes to live a comfortable, uncrowded life. We dream fine dreams of enlarging the home some day. Why not do the simpler, immediate thing, reduce the contents?

No doubt the holding of such an exhibition would draw a large audience.

Our Northern Sealing Fleet.

Excepting the Florizel Sailing To-Day

The wooden sealing steamers, which will prosecute the sealfishery on the northern front finished signing their crews yesterday evening and are got all supplies on board ready to start the voyage. They are the Neptune, Captain George Barbour; Samuel Blandford, Capt. William Winsor; Erik, Capt. N. Keen; Bloodhound, Capt. George Whiteley; Eagle, Capt. Ed. Bishop and Terra Nova, Capt. S. R. Winsor. These six ships are sailing from here to-day for West

Levyville, Pool's Island and Greenspond, respectively, and which ports they will clear from Saturday next, March 11th in quest of the white coats. That each ship will return with a full load of seals will be everybody's wish.

The Florizel, the only steel ship going out, will remain behind till Monday next, March 13th, when she will sail from St. John's for the ice-fields.

Plenty Bait.

But Drift Ice Hampers Fishery. From parties who reached the city from that section yesterday we are informed that codfish is found to be very plentiful on the Western Banks lately, but the weather conditions have become more evil and that trawlers made good hauls almost daily last week. The prevalence of heavy drift ice is reported to be interrupting operations in one particular section of the grounds. A fortunate circumstance, however, is the fact that the old familiar cry of "want of bait" is now unheard of as there is an abundant supply of fresh frozen herring. Halibut is reported scarce, though fancy prices are being paid for these fish, owing to keen competition among the buyers on the coast.

Dogs—French Poodle.

By GEORGE FITCH.

Author of "Al Good Old Siwash."

The French Poodle is a Parisian frivolity, which is imported in great numbers along with French actresses, hats, counts, and other trifles to add to the gaiety of this nation. He is a medium-sized, unanimously black dog with a handsome Persian lamb coat, a bulging forehead, a slender nose, and a sharp, falsetto bark. Man generally improves on nature by clipping off most of the poodle's hair, leaving him with a muffer around his throat, a Belasco mop over his feet and tail.

The poodle is a society dog and is a nuisance only to his owner, as his value does not permit his being allowed to chase automobiles, street cars and innocent bystanders, or to steal newspapers from the neighbors' porches. He is very congenial company for society folk, but owing to his repulsive and hysterical nature is not a friend of boys. Two boys with only the rudest appliances can reduce a French poodle to a state of complete hysteria in less than five minutes.

Man improves on nature by clipping off most of the poodle's hair.

Nature has not done so much for the poodle as man has. Man has dressed and educated him to a remarkable degree. The educated poodle is several steps above the French dancing master in accomplishments. He can not only waltz and do fancy dances on his hind legs, but on his fore legs as well. He can count up to ten, can tell the letters of the alphabet with the aid of a few judicious kicks, can walk the tight rope, ride a bicycle, turn back somnambulists, play simple musical instruments and sing more sweetly than most song and dance artists. He has in fact a natural gift for the stage, and is so fortunate that he is viewed by mere men with frantic envy. He pays no dues to the union, neither borrows nor lends money, and can bite the legs of the stage manager with impunity. Moreover, when he puts on a new act he is unable to rise early in the morning and read the facetious comments of a scornful critic upon it.

When adopted into rich families, the French poodle becomes very aristocratic, eating only the choicest food and developing almost human ill-health and crankiness.

LIGHT, HEAT, COMFORT!

The proprietor of one of the best known multiple shopping systems is credited with saying, "Give me any old shop, in any old street, and I'll guarantee to make it in twelve months the most widely known and best frequented shop in the district." He was asked to explain. Holding up three fingers he said, "I believe in the triad of LIGHT, WARMTH, COMFORT. I should dazzle the moths until the candle drew them, I should bring them into a warm, comfortable shop, filled with a soft, pleasing radiance, and the rest is—well, mere child's play."

Mixed metaphors, perhaps, but expressive. Now we can more than imagine the kind of shop this well-known individual would open, for we pass it in almost every town—always a landmark to the street. No one fails to notice it. There is an indefinable air of welcome and invitation as one stands for a moment on the pathway and lets one's gaze travel inside it. The subdued, restful lighting effect that so charms because of its very unobtrusiveness, the absence of dark corners, the intangible feeling that if one would step inside one would be sure of experiencing a delicious sense of warmth and comfort and cheerfulness—all these are part of its appeal. Truly a shop with an individuality.

We cordially invite all progressive business men to visit our showroom and see our latest Lighting and Heating Appliances, by the adoption of which the ideal outline in the above extract from a London paper may be easily secured. Our new RADIO X. Lamp and GASTEMP Radators fill all light and heat requirements.

When Rheumatism It Kills—"Nervine"

Effect of Nervine on Chronic Cases Is Almost Magical.

Exposure to wet or cold is apt to bring on an attack. The muscles stiffen, the joints swell, and exertion brings on excruciating twinges.

Often the pain shifts from one joint to another, and this is dangerous, as the heart is apt to be attacked. Death as a rule follows a heart attack.

The pain of rheumatism is quickly rubbed away with Nervine.

This is a swift, lasting and safe way to cure rheumatism. You can depend on Nervine. It has the power, the penetrating force, the control over pain that is so essential to a rheumatic remedy.

Lots of testimony to prove Nervine's certainty to cure.

Bachelor Romances

Recalling the Love Affairs of Some Famous Men.

Probably no man of fame has gone to a bachelor grave without one or more narrow escapes from Cupid's darts, however indifferently he may have professed to regard love.

Pitt always vowed that he had turned his back on the altar because he was "wedded to his country." To this cold-blooded statesman, however, more than once on the brink of matrimony, and was so infatuated with Miss W., a Devonshire beauty, that on one occasion he drank the health out of one of her dainty spectacles.

Theodore Hook, though he died a celibate, had his share of love adventures, and it was only lack of opportunity at the last moment that kept him from the altar. He had actually posted a letter of proposal when his heart failed him, and he had covered the mistake just as it was starting on its fateful journey.

Washington Irving's heart was buried in the grave of the beautiful girl to whom he had given it, when the assumption took her from him in the seventeenth year.

Two Great Passions.

"She died in the beauty of her youth," he wrote, "and in my memory she will ever be young and beautiful."

For fifty years he pilloved himself on her Bible and Prayer Book, and he died with her name on his lips.

The first moment Keats set eyes on Miss Fanny Brawne's beauty he was undone, and every later meeting plunged him deeper in her toils, until his broken health compelled him to leave England, the pain of parting from her was "beyond everything horrible," and in his last hours he cried in his agony
