treal was that the bucket shops and the brokers were the places where bank clerks went wrong and he thought the minister of justice should see that there was some restriction placed on the operation of these places. When the house resumed consideration of the bank act after the dinner recess, J. A. M. Alikins, of Brandon, argued that the section regarding registration of liens should be struck out. It was quite consistent with the principles of the bank act that farmers should advance money on their threshed grain in granaries. Farmers would be saved time if they were not compelled to hault their grain to storage centers and they should not be compelled to part with their grain to storage centers and they should not be compelled to part with their grain to storage centers and they should not be compelled to part with their grain to storage centers and they should not be compelled to part with their grain to convinced on that point himself. Banks should have the right, he said to take liens on cattle and the section had been put in the act to make the light clear. It had been the principle under the act for forty years that banks should look rather to personal security in the case of the farmers or the restaller, but the case was different with the wholesaler. It would be unfortunate, the thought, if the banks really became chattel mortgages of the personal property of farmers. The prope rprinciple had been to have loans made on a short time promissory note.

Does Not Include Hogs

Several members objected to the tet that the term "cattle" upon which inks could make loans did not induce hogs. The minister explained hat this clause of the bill had been deed particularly for Western ranchers, and was not meant to be extended of farmers generally. He said he would not like to see the banks engage in the chattel mortgage busi-

Definition of Rancher.

Mr. Sinclair (Guysboro), thought that there should be some definition of "rancher" in the bill, but R. B. Bennett (Calgary), did not believe the word susceptible to exact statutory definition in the present case. The proposed section should be amended, he said, so as to make it permissible for banks to lend money to ranchers or farmers on the security of cattle, because of the impossibility of fully defining "rancher."

Sir Wilfrid Laurier thought matters would be complicated by Mr. Bennett's suggestion. It would bring conusion as to the distinction of meaning between the two words.

Mr. Bennett, however, did not think the word "rancher" comprehensive enough and he went on to say that he himself did not believe the provision as to registration would be useful.

After some discussion the clause stood over. The house rose at 1.15.
