baffles all the orinthological wonders of the world. The grain crop had been cut off. Famine was in the land. In a cave by the brook Cherith sat a minister of God, Elijah, waiting for something to eat. Why did he not go to the neighbors? There were no neighbors? There were no neighbors; it was a wilderness. Why did he not pick some of the berries? There were none. If there had been, they would have been dried up. Seated one morning at the mouth of his cave, the prophet sees a flock of beds approaching. Oh, if they were only partridges, or if he only had an arrow with which to bring them down! But as they come nearer, he finds that they are not comestible, but unclean, and the eating of them would be spiritual death. The strength of the sweets all the rollogical and chronological. You said—and you said truthfully—that a white angel fiew through the newcomer, and asked a great many questions, genealogical and chronological. You said—and you said truthfully—that a white angel fiew through the room and left the little one stood with its two feet in the very sanctuary of your affection, and with its two hands it took hold of the altar of your soul. But one day there came one of the three scourges of children—scarlet fever, or croup, or diphtheria—and all that bright scene "hard times" with him. His ships never break on the rocks. His banks the death of the would swing out from the heavens a flock of ravens reaching from his gate to yours, until the food would be flung down the sky from beak to beak, and for the three would in the newcomer, and asked a great many duestions, genealogical and chronological. You said—and you said truthfully—that a white angel fiew through the room and left the little one stood with its two feet in the room and left the little one stood with its two feet in the room and left the newcomer, and white all gallet the room and left the room and left the room and left the room and left the room and with i down the sky from beak to beak, and from talon to talon. Notice again the story of the text, that the ravens did not allow Elijah to hoard up a surplus. They did not bring enough on Monday to last all the week. They did not bring enough one morning to last until the next morning. They came twice a day, and brought just enough for one time. You know just as well as I that the great fret of the world is that we want a surplus; we want the ravens to bring "All that is very poetic, you may have the black ravens; give me the gold eagles." We had better be content with just enough. If in the morning leagles." your family eat up all the food there is in the house, do not sit down and cry, and say, "I don't know where the next meal is to come from." About o, or 6, or 7 o'clock in the morning, just ook up, and vou will see two black spots on the sky, and you will hear the flapping of wings, and instead of Edgar A. Poe's insane raven alighting on the chamber door, "only this and nothing more," you will find Elijah's
