CRICKET IN LONDON-

Reminiscences of the Early Exponents of the Fine Old Game.

Famous Batsmen, Bowlers and Fielder Who Have Played in This City.

The Canadian Illustrated Monthly for January publishes an account of the rise and progress of cricket in Canada from the pen of Mr. Lindsay, the well-known Toronto bat. From the history the ADVER-It surpasses all other remedies in the worderful power which it possesses of curing TISER selects the following historical references to London and its cricketers, past

TISER selects the following historical references to London and its cricketers, past and prosent:

"Ontario has been, and is, the progressive field of Canadian cricket. In every county, in every fair-sized town, and in all its cities the game flourishes. Commencing in the west, we find that as early as 1851 a team of civilians was formed in London, of whom more than one-half were Canadian born, and who were able to hold their own well with the officers and soldiers of the garrison. Round arm bowling was then in its infancy, and the civilians, who still adhered largely to the under arm, profited much in the early matches which are recorded, from the numbers of wides due to the imperfect round arm of the military. In the match of May 28, 1851, the military bowled 31 wide balls, the civilians 7, yet nothing is more noticeable in these old scores than the steady reduction in wides as the art of round arm howling improved. Amongst the officers who played in London in 1851 and 1852 are to be found soveral names which recall the stirring events that took place soon after. Major Chester, of the Twenty-third Regiment, appears as a steady though not a large scorer; Mr. Duff, of the same regiment, was a shashing hitter, and Mr. Sayer, also of the Twenty-third, was a noted sprint runner and cricketer. In 1854, Major Chester, having succeeded to the command of the Twenty-third, was a hosted sprint runner and cricketer. In 1854, Major Chester, having succeeded to the command of the Twenty-third, was a hosted sprint runner and cricketer. In 1854, Major Chester, having succeeded to the command of the Twenty-third, was shot dead at the Alma while bravely leading on his men against the Russian batteries. Mr. Sayer was shot through both ankles at the same battle and lamed for life, and Mr. Duff was taken prisoner by the Russians in the very early dark of the moraing of lakemann.

in the very early dark of the morning of Inkermann.

"Of the civilians who played in London in those days Thomas Ellis was long the recognized leader till he died of consumption in 1869, but those who knew him will never forget him. A horn cricketer, he was the life and soul of the struggling club, and his knowledge of the game considering his opportunities was marvelous. R. Bayly, Q.C., then an undergraduate at the University of Toronto, was Ellis' lieutenant and made large scores. Edward Harris, J. W. B. Rivers and an English machinist named. Hardcastle were also amongst the prominent scorers. The Harris, J. W. B. Rivers and an English machinist named Hardcastle were also amongst the prominent scorers. The military left the country in 1853, and the London club then for the first time began to play matches away from their own ground. In August of that year they invited the Chatham club to visit them and were themselves beaten in one inning, but had their revenge at Chatham before the close of the next month, when they won by four wickets. In these matches four Englishmen, brothers, named Purser, played well for Chatham, and Goodysar who is or was high constable for that town, was very successful both as a bat and lob bowler. A. C. Hammond, now in San Francisco, appears as a large scorer on the London side. Later on in the fifties matches were played with Paris, Hamilton, Woodstock and St. Catharines, with varying fortune. A club was formed at the village of Delaware by two good Englishmen—Dr. Billington, now of Strathroy, and Waring, who was killed in an accident in September, 1857. This club now survives and has played several matches with London, in all of which, however, the Londoners were able to console themselves for their defeat elsewhere. The next season the London club were stimulated by the accession to its membership of Capt. Knatchbull-Hugessen, since deceased, a brother of the present Lord Bradbourne, an English public school

He was chose patient bat and was for many years it reliable scorer of the club. He was chose as one of the eleven to represent Canad in the Halifax tournament and has played on international matches with the Unite States. His energy kept his club to the front, and during the period of his general ship a number of excellent players were produced or became members of the club amongst whom may be mentioned Alfre Luard, C. S. Hyman, Shaw, the present Mr. Justice Meredith, who was an excellent point and a very steady bat, the lat Henry Becher, Q.C., W. Girdlestone, now of Winnipeg, John and Thos. Gillean and the late Frank Cronyu. The club felt the effect of the craze for baseball, now happil passed away, and became almost extine for a time. During the past two or threseasons, new life has been infused into it and it has again taken its place as one the leading cricket clubs of the Province.

WEPT TOO LATE.

on Crutches-He Attributes His Crime to Drink.

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., Feb. 6.—Wallar W. Holmes, wife murderer, who we hanged here on Friday, walked to the gallows on crutches. As the noise we placed over his head it slid down upon boutonniere in the lapel of his coat, and he quickly asked that it be moved so as not to injure the flowers. He was then allowed the say a final word. He said:

"I only wish to say that the statement have made about the crime with which stand charged is true. I have been mis represented in some things, and am ver grateful to all who have been kind to me Crime to Drink.

stand charged is true. I have been mrepresented in some things, and am ver grateful to all who have been kind to n and tried to assist me."

Holmes wept as the black cap was draw over his face. The statement to whis Holmes referred was one he made recently to the effect that the murder of his wis was entirely unpremeditated, that he we was entirely unpremeditated, that he would wonder the influence of liquor, and that so
