TERMINAL FACILITIES

Mr. Joseph Hunter writes us an interesting letter about the Songhees Reserve. It is an unexpected contribution to the history of a question, have no reference whatever to the which has occupied the attention of the people of this city for a long time. Mr. Hunter's opinion that the Reserve, if it ever passes out of the in this connection. It is not, however, too soon to direct attention to the latter as a harbor. If the proare no engineering difficulties in the way, but any plan would involve either the crossing of the harbor or the utiliaztion of city streets, including a part of the Dallas Road, for railway purposes. We think there would be a good deal of objection to the latter. Bridging the harbor would not be a very serious matter, and bascule bridges are very slight obsides to navigation. A bascule bridge with a double lift, that is opening in the centre, both sides beopening in the centre, both sides being lifted simultaneously, can be the simultaneously, can be those Guards called home the gar-should be any diminution of the farmraised to a perpendicular position in a minute. It is not always necessary to lift a double bascule bridge to the perpendicular. Vessels do not wait for it, for as a rule only their smokestack, and masts are higher than the bridge, and as soon as the roadway has been lifted sufficiently as the continental Railway will be completed in 1912; but Mr. Hays is quoted as departed by the Canada, would take than the bridge, and as soon as the roadway has been lifted sufficiently to permit these to pass through, they go on their way. If there were a bascule bridge in the place of the present railway bridge, a steamer after rounding Songhees point could slow down to half speed, and before specified the bridge it would be elevated far enough to permit her to of what it has done for imperial declevated far enough to permit her to

It will be time enough to tell going steamships will lie.

We are not unmindful of the facilities that may be provided at Esquimalt for terminal purposes, and we are prepared to look upon the western suburb with its admirable harbor as n point of fact a part of Victoria, although it is not included within the city limits. At the present rate of growth there will be 100,000 people living in the city, and its suburbe within a short time. When that time comes we will have a continuous city from Oak Bay to Esquimalt Harbor. We have that now as far as Esquimalt Road is concerned. What it will be like when the popula tion has doubled, each reader can decide for himself, but we think that when that time comes we will have ceased to speak of Victoria and Esand commercially, as we have long ago ceased to regard them as two places residentially.
