Socialism and State Rights. over the border things are rapidly getting into shape for the Presidential election of 1892. One need not be a witch conjecture that the Republican party, being the one now in power, will be pretty sure to do what it can to sustain things as they are, with such tariff modifications as experience aggests if it does not positively dictate. But the party which was defeated in the great war, and which (in national affairs) has been out of power most of the time ever something coming as near as possible volution. And we may consider it as pretty well settled already that the expansion of State Rights, along with the cutting down of the power of the National Govern-ment and Congress together, will be a lead-ing part of the Opposition program. It makes centralization" a main objection to the ment now in power and the party The Spectator says: supporting it: and we can scarcely condense or otherwise improve our contemporary's or otherwise improve our contemporary's statement of wherein the two parties are at odds on this important issue. We quote:

The Government has now entered upon the first year of its second century. It happens to be also the first year of the Republican party's return to power. Yet in the first message of its President to Congress we find a steady drift toward centralization, an earnest appeal for pushing federal government further than ever before into the province of State sovereignty. ince of State sovereignty. President Harrison recommends: First—The enactment of a federal law for as protection of all federal officers and the the protection of all federal officers and the trial of all such cases in the courts of the trial of all such cases in the courts of the United States.

Second—Prohibitory and penal legislation against trusts.

Third—Transferring all naturalization matters from State to federal courts.

Fourth—A statute regulating the construction and equipment of railway cars.

Fifth—National aid to education—the notations Baits subseque torious Blair scheme.

Sixth—Federal control of elections.

Seventa—Legislation to secure civil rights to colored citizens.

These matters are now and always have been left to the States. With regard to some of them the power of Congress is doubtful, and as to others it is more than doubtful.

Whether the third is more than doubtful. and as to others it is more than doubtful. Whether that body has any authority to oust sthe States from their jurisdiction over assaults by or against federal officers is a vitally important question now awaiting decision by the Supreme Court in the Nagle case. As to trusts, it is difficult to conceive of any practicable measure not connected with interstate traffic Congress can enact which the Supreme Court would allow to stand. The Blair scheme is a piece of paternalism which if constitutional could serve no better purpose than to reduce the surplus. No doubt Congress has power to enact a proper federal election law, but a statute which would virtually take the whole matter out of the hands of the State authorities would be a flagrant abuse of that power.

v. Dr. Wild Talks to an Inquisitive Com Before commencing his sermon at the Bond et Congregational Church last night, Rev. Dr. Wild read a letter from some one had heard him preach a sermon on charity. The writer of the letter wanted to know why 'rich" men like Dr. Wild didn't take a dose "rich" men like Dr. Wild didn't take a dose of the charity medicine themselves, and after giving of their abundance then talk to others about their duty towards their fellow-men.

In answer to this rather pointed enquiry Dr Wild presented a detailed statement of his income during the nine and a quarter years he has been fastor of the Bond-street Church. During that time he has drawn in salary, $34,250; he has received $15,650 in lecture fees; $1560 in wedding fees, and his funeral fees, gifts of money, etc., have amounted to $3217, making a total income of $53,117. It was a singular, and, it seems to me, rather a lamentable circumstance, what on such an occasion the knowledge of the authorities should not have gone behind the year 1834. The public of Toronto, and the distinguished prelates who had been invited to attend from distant dioceses, wentaway from the Jubilee ceremonies utterly unaware of the fact that before the incorporation of the city of Toronto in that year, the church wardens of St. James' Church had been, ex-officio, for nearly thirty years the town wardens of the town of York. Should there ever occur to one of our modern Mayors the thought of inquiring where the early official records of the town, before the incorporation, are to be found, his search would lead him at last to the vestry books of St. James. There, and there only, he would find, officially recorded, the names, and terms of office of his predecessors in the government of Toronto. By virtue of an Act to be found in one of the earliest statute books of Upper Canada, the same site where the stately structure of St. James' Cathedral has supplanted the original hewn log church of our forefathers, was the scene of the annual election of all the functionaries of the Municipal Government between 1807 and 1884—namely, of the "Church Wardens or Town Wardens," the Town Clerk, the Assessors, the Overseers of Highways, and minor officials. The town elections were held, according to law, on the old site set apart by the Inperial Government in the plan of the town, and granted by royal patent "to the sole use of the parishioners and inhabitants of the Town Officials. The town elections were held in the Parliament House, and no church existed on the church-yard site. In the year 1807, however, the first vestry book of St. James' Church opens with the following entry, in now partially faded ink:

On Monday, the first day of March, 1807, a town meetitine was held, acreably not the Act of Leesly later.

The Brothehood's scheme of dividing the entire receipts is a very good one. For illustration, say Buffalo plays three games with Boston at Boston, and the entire receipts would amount to $9000. The Buffalo club would carry away $4500. Then the Boston club goes to Buffalo and plays a Boston club goes to Buraio and plays a series of games, which net $4000. Boston gets but $2000. Thus it will be seen that a poor paying city or a tail end club can manage to exist. Besides, it encourages weak clubs to strengthen. IF YOU ARE SUFFERING from debility and loss of appetite; if your stomach is out of order, or your mind confused; take Ayer's Sarsaparilla. This medicine will restore physical force and elasticity to the system, more surely and speedily than any tonic yet discovered. For six months I suffered from liver and stomach troubles. My food did not nourish me, and I became weak and very much emaciated. I took six bottles of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and was cured.
