DEAL KINDLY.

If any person has fallen by temptation, that is the very one who should have our immediate and generous sympathy. This is the doctrine taught in the New Testament. Satan will strive to show the unfortunate men and women that there is no sincerity in such sympathy, or that there is no use in making renewed efforts to reform. His assaults in these directions should only serve to increase the desire of the godly to rescue the fallen.

This should be the case all the more, because the irreligious world will be sure to use such failures against Christianity. The only way to repel such aspersions effectively will be in honest, patient efforts to reclaim the wanderer on the part of Christian brethren.

In this labor of love we should never forget that our sympathy can never fully express the unflinching tenderness of Jesus for the soul he would save. In no truer way can we win his regard than to do just what he would undertake were he upon earth, namely, to save the tempted. He who lives to engage in this work will merit and receive the final award: "Inasmuch as ye did it unto one of the least of these, ye have done it unto me."—New York Advocate.
