

CAPITAL AND LABOUR.

Capital is simply the savings of previous labour and is useful in sustaining present and future labour.

Capital, therefore, is produced by labour. Labour is simply toilsome work, which is generally performed under the direction of bosses or task-masters, and is rewarded by drafts on the fruits of previous labour or Capital.

The custodians of Capital may abuse their position and grind the faces of labourers; and, labourers may form trades-unions and organize strikes; but, labour and capital will not quarrel any more than a man will quarrel with his meals.

RECEPTION OF MGR. CONROY AT THE ST. DENIS ACADEMY.

With that kind condescension which is peculiarly His Excellency Mgr. Conroy reached the St. Denis Academy through the rain and cold and snow of Thursday last. In striking contrast with the clouded wintry weather without, the Grand Hall of the Academy presented a most brilliant appearance. A thousand tapers tastefully placed, and numerous gas lights, from crystal gasaliers, supplying the absent sun-rays, but a fairy seeming to the richly decorated reception hall, when two hundred young school girls awaited his coming to welcome his Excellency. And here, as it is at home, the youngest were the most favored, and it was their privilege on this occasion to be allowed to go meet their illustrious visitor, and strew the way with flowers; and the little ones did so with a grace that was perfect. Dressed in white and carrying their pretty flower baskets, their innocent little faces wreathed in smiles, betrayed their delight and happiness, and lent a charm to the scene, which all who saw it felt, but which cannot be conveyed in words. While with this fairy body guard, his Excellency passed through the ranks and reached the throne which stood at the farther end of the spacious hall, a burst of splendid music broke out from six pianos played by 12 of the Senior pupils.

When his Excellency was seated, three little ladies, Miss Agnes Kavanagh, Miss Crompton, and Miss Agnew, advanced to the foot of the throne, and in a beautiful written verse, gave expression to the respect and gratitude which they and their companions felt for, and the joyous welcome they offered to their much venerated visitor. After which Miss Barbeau and Miss Delorme presented his Excellency two beautiful bouquets. Then the choir of the Convent sang a mountain song; the music was appropriately chosen, and was expressive of the joy and happiness that they all felt like at being honored by the visit of the Papal Legate. When the chorus had ceased, Miss Tasse presented herself before the Legate and recounted briefly in exquisite French, the history of this establishment, and ended by gracefully saying that the honor done them on that day which would be ever gratefully remembered, would lend a brilliancy to their Conventuals, compensating for the struggles of the past, and acquiring a future of brightest prospect.

His Excellency seemed much pleased, and warmly thanked the pupils of the St. Denis Academy and their Reverend teachers, and happily alluding to the sudden change in the weather, said he would ever remember his first day of winter in Canada; for on that day he had seen the wind strip the trees of their leaves, and the tempest-driven snow wrap up the cold and shivering earth in its cold and frozen winter, again and within the same hour he had beheld the spring-time with its odorous flowers, and Summer and its delicious fruits;— And His Excellency explained that they the good children before him, were the flowers of Christian society, and that already the careful education bestowed on them in the splendid institution they had the good fortune to attend was producing abundant,—this His Excellency could perceive even in the short hour he had spent among them. His Excellency hoped that the good seed which was being sown in their hearts in the springtime of their lives would be received in grateful soil, and that throughout their after lives, when separated from their much loved teachers, and they would have to struggle without anticipating help, through the clouds and storms and difficulties of that dangerous world for which their school education helped greatly to strengthen them, that then the light of their springtime Sun might throw a guiding ray through the cloud to re-kindle their courage when perhaps it had been nigh overwhelmed in the storm.

His Excellency then visited the whole building and congratulated the Reverend ladies of the Institution, on the admirable arrangements, that struck his eye everywhere as convenience to the health and comfort of their pupils.

All were delighted, for if the young girls were overjoyed with the honor done them by the Legate of the Holy See, so may the good nuns be very much pleased with the success of their pupils; and the people of the "quarter St. Denis" should consider themselves specially favored in having such a school in their midst.

BISHOP O'BRIEN AT BROCKVILLE AND BREWERS MILLS.

To the Editor of the True Witness. Sunday the 21st of October was a day and an occasion long to be remembered in the beautiful town of Brockville. The Bishop of the Diocese made his first pastoral visit and gave the Catholics there of an opportunity of welcoming their former parish priest, now their Bishop, and a good and hearty welcome did they extend him. They remembered well his long years of holy toil and priestly zeal in the cause of religion and education, how he found their church heavily in debt, and how, under his guiding hand, it became one of the handsomest, most ornate and chastely finished churches in the Province—a lasting monument of what mighty things financial ability combined with perseverance that knows no faltering can accomplish.

He was so appalled to them, as he did to other parishes, to assist him in paying off the heavy debt that encumbered the Diocese when he became its Bishop. His appeal, I am happy to say, was not made to an ungrateful people. Their hearts and their purses were ever open to him, from the day when a young priest he was appointed their pastor, their hearts he had enchained to his person, in veneration and love, by his priestly life and fervid eloquence, their purest strings he untied by the grand cause of building and embellishing the house of God, and the promoting of education he so gracefully so pointedly and with so much ardour, advocated. And now that he addressed them as Bishop on a matter that interested the entire Diocese, were they to be forgetful of their former love? No. And the offering of eight hundred and ten dollars was their united response. We all remember the princely gift they presented him on the occasion of his leaving to take charge of his Diocese. And they were too happy to have an opportunity once more presented them of testifying to his Lordship that they hoped even to be among the most sincere and grateful of his spiritual children.

I will not, sir, essay to give you and your readers a pen-portrait of the joy that lit up every countenance of the large number, say three thousand, Catholics and Protestants—the Protestants of Brockville always vied with their Catholic neighbours in tendering the homage of respect to Dr. O'Brien—that thronged St. Francis Xavier Church when they beheld him, who was two years and a half ago the priest beloved of his own, and admired by all, enter that charmingly, beautiful pulpit, presenting a picture of health, to preach to them in the character of Bishop, and address them in that lofty eloquence so peculiarly his own. I will leave the filling in and all the pleasing shades of the happy picture to your own imagination. Though the present pastor is deservedly held in the greatest esteem because of his amiability and for many virtues, a void has been created by the elevation of Dr. O'Brien to the Episcopate that cannot be easily filled. His winning and gentlemanly deportment drew all hearts towards him. His polished and learned discourses on the Dogmas of the Church captivated the refined scholar and the sinner; he was to them as an Ambrose to the rhetorician and philosopher, Augustin. His faithful exposition of the Sacraments of the Church, of her several rites and ceremonies and her divine mystery endeared him to every Catholic heart. His fostering care of the schools endeared him in the affections of the parent. And finally, his devotedness to the poor, whose humblest cabin he never passed by without entering to learn their wants and bring them succor, inspired those children of misfortune to hold his name in benediction. Who can wonder then that the day was one of rejoicing. Well might they say in the word of Sacred Scripture, "this is the day which the Lord hath made, let us exult and rejoice upon it!"

Leaving Brockville, its beautiful scenery, its truly magnificent Church, its really generous people, and its present worthy and hospitable parish priest, we find his Lordship, on the following Sunday, at Brewers Mills, a rural Mission, engaged in the sublime work of his Apostolate. Here again was he received with such an enthusiastic welcome as can only be given by the good old settlers coming from that fatherland of faith, of attachment to their priesthood, and of devotedness to sacrifices in the cause of the ancient Church—Ireland. In this little Irish settlement, formed into a separate mission some three or four years ago, and where they have since then built a handsome Church and commodious priests residence, the offering was generous yes princely for those humble tillers of the soil—three hundred dollars. But, sir, they heard the Bishop for the first time, and in their own Church. They saw him entertained in their own parish house, and they were happy. He had but to come, to be seen, and be heard, and he won the affections of all. He confirmed their children, preached before and after the administration of the Sacrament, and lectured in the evening. On Monday he erected for them Stations or Way of the Cross and touchingly dwelt in advance on devotion to the passion of our dear Lord. He blessed their cemetery, the city of their dead, where many that were near and dear to them repose awaiting the final resurrection, and the sublime and affecting beautiful discourse of his Lordship, on the sacredness of the place, will never be forgotten by those who had the happiness of hearing him.

Were it not that I have already transcribed I fear to an unwarrantable extent on your space I would here lay before your readers the manifold labours of his Lordship during the short time that he is Bishop. Allow me, sir, to give in a few words a summary.

He has already visited over forty Stations and Missions. In all of these he gave confirmation, preached and heard confessions. In the majority of them he delivered lectures on one or the other of the Dogmas of the Church. In Lindsay, Peterboro, and Port Hope, he gave missions, preaching generally three and sometimes oftener in the day and engaging with the citizens who assisted in the Confessional. He blessed several cemeteries, erected the Stations in many Churches where this devotion had not been previously indulged, laid the corner-stones of two, and blessed three Churches. He also ordained five priests. And, finally, through his ceaseless exertions the debt of fifty thousand dollars, which pressed so heavily on the diocese, absorbing by interest, or, incubus like, destroying every resource, standing in the way of every improvement, and rendering vain every effort to finish and embellish the Cathedral, &c. is now reduced to the comparatively trifling sum of eight thousand.

Should not the united prayer of the lay and cleric of a Diocese presided over by such a Bishop duly ascend to the throne of God, that a long and a happy life may be his to continue his labour of love? FAITH.

AN EARTHQUAKE.

THE LAST SENSATION—MONTREAL GETS A SHAKING—NO CASUALTIES.

The last sensation to record is an earthquake, the shock of which perceptibly moved the city, and greatly alarmed a large portion of its inhabitants. The wave of terrestrial disturbance appears to have been both wide and far extended. It is reported all through the Eastern section of New York parts of New Hampshire, Vermont and Western Massachusetts, and as far north and west as Ottawa, and no doubt extended much farther. It occurred here a few minutes to two o'clock yesterday morning, the shock lasting about thirty seconds, the preliminary rumbling perhaps occupying another twenty seconds, and the receding noise occupying another thirty seconds. The first announcement of the disturbance was a low, rumbling sound, which perceptibly grew harsher as it ended with what might be termed bumping or explosive noise; then came the shock or tremor, which was felt most severely by those sleeping in the upper stories of tall houses.

CANADIAN ITEMS.

THE JESUIT BARRACKS, QUEBEC.—For weeks past, nothing at all has been done towards removing the unsightly debris of the old Jesuit Barracks in the Upper Town. The public were certainly under the impression when the work of demolition was commenced, that the rubbish was to be cleared away from the spot and not left lying upon the ground. At present it forms a terrible eyesore in the heart of the city, and it is certainly high time that steps should be taken for its removal. We certainly fail to see the advantage of having the old walls battered in, if the broken ruins are to be left lying upon the site. At the lower corner, facing Fabrique street and the old Market Square, there is also left standing and propped up by pieces of wood, a very dangerous remnant of an stone wall, which should be removed immediately.

VILLA MARIA.—Many a former pupil of Villa Maria, Montreal, will hear with sorrow that the Sisters of the Congregation have lost during the past week one of their members whose name was for years identified in a remarkable manner with the high musical culture of that far-famed institution. On the morning of Tuesday, the 23d instant, Sister St. Sophie breathed her last in the fullness of Christian peace, surrounded by her well-loved sisters in religion, the companions of her useful and most meritorious life. Although this accomplished religious had been for some time visibly declining, her death was no less keenly felt by the community to which she had rendered such signal service. As a teacher of music—the harp and piano especially—Sister St. Sophie had perhaps no superior on this continent. She was in fact, a rare musical genius, to music as an art in so far as was consistent with her religious profession, and how successful she was in making others good musicians will now be remembered with grateful affection by those far-dispersed pupils of Villa Maria who had the advantage of her admirable musical training.

May her soul rest in peace!—New York Tablet

THE ORANGEMEN OF MONTREAL.—At a meeting largely attended, passed resolutions, declaring that the Grand Jury "in open violation of positive evidence," "failed to do their imperative duty," because they did not find a true bill against Sheehan, accused of the murder of Hackett, and that "such a failure of justice can not but encourage similar outrages on the part of blood-thirsty and fanatical ruffians," etc., and they call on the Protestants of Canada to rise as one man and demand such a change in the law "as will satisfy them." This is a characteristic proceeding. A few days ago, a woman who had sworn positively that she saw some person shoot an Orangeman in the suburbs of Montreal, pleaded guilty to the charge of perjury, and intimated that she was induced by some persons she would name, to commit the crime. Of that, neither the Orange Association in indignation meeting assembled, nor the papers which sympathize with them, have anything to say, although of the guilt of the woman and the causes which led to it, there can be no doubt, while as to the action of the Grand Jury the reasonable presumption is that they did their duty.
