PARENT WON HIS CASE

MONTREAL, Nov. 17 .- (Special). Ex-Premier Parent yesterday won his suit against Senator Legris, securing damages from the court at Three Rivers for $1000 and costs. He sued Senator Legris for $10,000 damages as the result of charges made against him by the Senator at St. Jerome during the by-election campaign of 1904. Senator Legris charged the then Pre-nier Parent with malfeasance of various kinds, but more especially in con-nection with the administration of the province's timber resources. Shortly afterwards Parent was boosted out of the premiership by Lomer Gouin, the present premier, and he took a number of libel actions as a result of the charges made against him.

As to the payment of a hundred dollars to Mr. Robinson, Stacey's solicitor, after the getting of the cheques, His lordship said that he thought this was a "deliberate attempt to bribe."

"I think," said his lordship, "that Miller intended to close Robinson's mouth," the hundred dollars being Miller's own money, paid over as if it were Stacey's money for application on Stacey's account. A proposal for deeding a farm to Thomas Stacey, brother of James, by Miller, his lordship described as an effort to bribe Thomas Stacey to get him to assist Miller in keeping James Stacey's money. Robinson's conduct was commendable, the solicitor having returned the money. He had "acted the part of an honest solicitor; which is synonymous with an honest man."

Miller oddaed fraudylently and after Miller obtained Stacey's money, his lordship added, fraudulently and after misrepresentation sufficient to set the transaction aside. In the meantime the judge has an open mind for the reading of Miller's evidence, etc.

the great majority-of souls went first to the former, and those who stub-bornly resisted the means of grace went into the final state of torment a hopeless condition. He, conversant with the Roman Catholic doctrine up-on this subject, rejected this teaching, and consequently, were it true, would doubtless be consigned to that state. But the great majority of mankind, not being thoroly conversant with this doc-trine, and all Roman Catholics, ex-cepting a few saints, who were so few that they could be almost counted up-on the fingers, went immediately after death into purgatory. And so careter death into purgatory. And so careful was that church upon this point that no one was canonized until several centuries after death. Consequently, the popes, cardinals, archbishops and bishops, as well as practically all mankind, went, upon death, into purgatory. Dante's Inferno, as illustrated by Dore, gave a most vivid and accurate representation of the Catholic doctrine upon this subject. That the popes, etc., immediately after death went there was shown by the fact that went there was shown by the fact that prayers were ordered to be said for the repose of their souls, because they were supposed to be in anguish and torture, from which, however, they would eventually be relieved when purged from their sins. Popes also, at their jubilees arranged to themselves. their jubilees, arrogated to themselves alties of purgatory.

"I am not here to criticize the Catholic doctrine," said Mr. Russell, "for it is a more reasonable view of the future condition than the belief which Protestants usually accept as true. It would be very much easier for me to be a Catholic than to hold the ordinary opinions prevalent among Protestants concerning hell, because their doctrine furnishes a means of escape. And whether the soul is consigned to purgatory for 100, 1000 or 100,000 years, hope exists.
