ON WHEAT IMPORTED INTO U.S.

Washington, Dec. 30 - (Special.)-The first important step in the extension of the drawback system, along the lines favored by Secretary Shaw, as a substitute for tariff revision, will be to allow the refund of duties on Canadian wheat imported to be mixed with American grain in the production of flour exclusively for export. Attorney-General Moody has decided that this can be done un. der the drawback law. His opinion was approved at the cabinet meeting to-day, and Mr. Shaw will issue an order providing for the

Promises to Deal With Momentous Questions and Properties on January 2, 1905

To the Readers of My Story,

"Frenzied Finance":

During the past two days cer tain people have put afloat the statement that I had sold out to Standard Oil, that Everybody's Magazine had been bought up, and that I would discontinue my story. Of course, this dastardly charge was in keeping with others of a like kind, which have been circulated for the same purpose.

Amalgamated stock at the first rumor jumped $5 a share. To-day I gave notice I would answer this charge, and Amalgamated dropped $5 per share. If the American people needed a simple illustration of what the Wall-street game of the "system" is, here they have it. That Wall-street and the "system" cannot say I have sprung another "attack" without giving them full notice, that they may brace themselves. I herewith inform them that I will give out to the press of America and Europe at midnight, Monday, Jan. 2, another of my large advertisements, wherein I will deal in plain language and unmistakable terms with momentous questions and properties.

As Wall-street and the "sys-

BROCKTON SHOWS ITS HEART GOODERHAM'S FINAL RALL'

Hall Crowded and Candidate Warmly Endorsed-Platform Speakers and Audience.

George H. Gooderham held his final meeting in the mayoralty campaign at Brockton Hall last night. By 8 o'clock the hall was comfortably filled, and by 8.30 standing room was at a premium Every inch of space on the platform was taken, the aisles were filled with people standing, and the crowd that could not get seats extended outside the entrance on to the landing and the steps. It was an enthusiastic meeting. When Mr. Gooderham entered the hall he was given a loud and prolonged cheer, which continued until he reached the platform. A. Creelman presided, ed the platform. A. Creelman presided, and with him on the platform were: James Stewart, John Fawcett. Mr. Galbraith. F. J. Sabine. Mr. Tait, Mr. Day, Mr. Beatty, Hugh Kelly, Arthur Vankoughnet and Frank Ley.

The first speaker was James Stewart, an aldermanic candidate, who said he had been approached by the temperance people. Fortunately or unfortunately he was the only representative had been approached by the temperance people. Fortunately or unfortunately, he was the only representative of organized labor in the ward. As a representative of the Moulders' Union, he took no stand on the temperance question. That was a matter entirely for the people to decide. He believed that his own example in leading a temperate life had done more to lift up his co-workers than any preacher in Toronto.

C. A. B. Brown said he had not heretofore taken a part in the election. Mr.
Gooderham had done much for the citizens of Toronto on the board of education, and he had almost the unanimous endorsation of that body in his candidature for the mayoralty.

Thomas Hurst spoke of Mr. Gooderham as a business man. He did not think Mr. Urquhart had been a success as a mayor, and referred to promises made to the electors two years ago, which he had not carried out. Mr.
Gooderham had been spoken of as a man without experience; but business ability was the chief requisite for the mayoralty, and Mr. Gooderham had the necessary qualities for the chief executive.

executive.

Mr. Day said he had found Mr. Gooderham honorable, fair and square in sport and in business, and if he was leaving the country he would entrust his property to him, knowing that it would be honestly administered.

Earvey Hall said he believed there were only two candidates in the field. He criticized Mr. Urquhart's record on his promised improvements and benefits to the city in the way of cheaper telephones, a better street railway fervice and cheaper gas.

J. W. Kennedy, a representative of trade unionism, had no hesitation in endorsing the candidature of Mr. Goodernam. The labor interests of the carpenter, the plumber, the steamfitter, the
