PLANS BIG TOURNEY TO GET MAN WHO CAN WHIP JOHNSON

(By W. W. Naughton.) If the scheme Hugh D. McIntosh has in view, works out the way the promoter expects, Australia will be the scene of all the heavy-weight fights next summer, which by the way will be next winter in these latitudes. McIntosh has his lines out for every heavy-weight that is supposed to be worth his salt, either as a fighter or an attraction. The lure McIntosh is using is that he wishes to arrange an elimination tourney for the purpose of developing an opponent for Jack Johnson. Needless to say, he intimates that Johnson will be on hand ready to risk his title with the survivor of the tourney.

Sam Langford has been asked to visit Australia, and so has Sam McVey. So has Al Kaufman and so has Jim Flynn. If Carl Morris has received no invitation as yet, he need not begin to sulk. He will surely be asked to participate in the grand free-for-all. But in Australia at present there are comparatively few heavies, but that will not matter so much if all the Americans who have received offers from McIntosh make the trip. The visitors will be strong enough Americans to make the tourney an imposing affair.

Some Heavies in Australia. There are some heavies out there of course, Bill Lang, the champion of the British Empire, is in Australia, and so is Jack Lester, who seems to be the elimination trouble from afar and is prolonging his exile so as to be in on the big days. Then they have one, Bill Turner, a Tasmanian who is thought to be a fellow of infinite promise. Dick Arndt, the world's rowing champion, has had a boxing bee in his honor for quite a while. Dick was first a cycling champion and then he made up his mind to become an oarsman. By wonderful determination he mastered the river pastime and won the premiership. He has an idea that if he tackles boxing he may meet with similar success, and it may be, if the McIntosh venture thrives. Dick will decide to become a championship candidate.

In such case the Australian representatives would be Lang, Turner and Arndt; the American, Lester, Kaufman, Flynn, Langford, McVey and possibly Morris. Jack Johnson, who is always an uncertain quantity, and who contradicts himself nearly every day, says now that he has not decided to fight McIntosh in Australia. Probably if Langford had not been invited, Johnson would have jumped at the chance. In any case, if, as rumor has it, Johnson will have to fight before long in order to replenish his exchequer, he will be compelled to follow the bunch out yonder. There will be nobody left north of the Equator for him to box.

Australia is ripe for a big slug-fest of the kind described. Times are good out yonder and money is plentiful. Boxing which is always a staple sport there, is more popular than ever at present. The Ruscutters Bay Stadium on the outskirts of Sydney would, of course, be the scene of the elimination contests and the championship match which would bring the Queensland carnival to a conclusion. The tourney would probably string along through the summer and autumn and have its culmination about Easter Monday next.

Depends on the Terms. Now there is many a slip and the McIntosh scheme may not go through. A good deal depends on the terms he offers the Americans for their preliminary fights. There isn't a man among them, with the possible exception of Langford, who would consider the prospect of a match with Johnson as a rosy. The white Australian spirit, which pervades that country at present, would probably cause a shrinkage in the receipts if the two colored heavyweights were sent together at the close of the tourney. Just what Jack Johnson intends doing is a good deal of a conundrum. Nothing much has been heard recently of his match with Petty Officer Curran. This was to have taken place at the football grounds in Dublin, and was to have been managed by Flanagan, who acted as Johnson's officer toward the close of the training days at Reno. If the Johnson-Curran affair has been called off, it is highly probable that the Johnson-Bombardier Wells go will also be wiped off the schedule. It is hard to say, in fact, which of the two propositions is the more ridiculous. Unless Johnson deliberately pulled to the petty officer and the bombardier, neither would last a full round.

Even since Ty Cobb has demonstrated that he is the greatest ball player the game has ever developed, a much higher standard being set by the young players who come into fast company. Every player, at most, is compared with the mighty Cobb, and naturally loses in comparison. There are not apt to be any more Cobbs for years, and the sooner the club owners realize this fact and will be satisfied with developing players of much less ability the better they will be off. Simply because a player is not in Cobb's class, does not mean that he cannot be a valuable man for the team. Cobb should be eliminated from all comparisons. The club which turns down youngsters simply because they do not show the making of a player of the calibre of the Tiger's star is going to have a hard time building up a ball team. A club like Washington, for instance cannot be too particular in its selection of material. It must take long chances, for it must be remembered that regardless of what happens it can be no worse off than it is. Twenty ball players may have to be purchased before one is found who will furnish the link that is now missing to make the team a winner, and, judged on recent performance, McAlister needs more than one link to complete his chain.

PRESIDENT OF LEAGUE MAKES A STATEMENT

New York, N. Y., July 29.—The mayor of Baltimore, President Barrow and a few other deluded persons appear to have been the only ones to take the talk of a transfer of the Boston club to Baltimore seriously. So far as can be learned President Lynch, of the national league has never expressed himself in favor of the change, although he may have been misquoted. Mr. Barrow might have spared himself any anxiety and avoided his peppy statement if he had waited another day, as the news comes from Boston that William Hepburn Russell will not sell the franchise at least for the present. This news was embodied in the following message.
