MOVING DAY WAS MARKED BY RAIN

Many people seeking new homes at outside points—Some incidents of the day

Moving day, like many of its predecessors, was marked by inclement weather, rain occurring practically throughout the day. Many residents this year were able to make a change earlier in the week, but express companies and others who undertake removal contracts report a very busy time on Saturday, a noticeable feature being the large number of people who took up new abodes at points outside the city. One well known removal concern reports having been obliged to decline nearly forty contracts for removal. Many people this year have sought new homes at such outside places as Coldbrook, the Courtenay Bay district and Fairville.

Owing to difficulty experienced in getting away on Saturday several have been obliged to remain at their old quarters over the regular time, and no doubt there will be more changes today. There does not appear to have been so much difficulty in securing flats and other residences this year as has been the case in times past, and there are still many places available for renting in the city at about the same figures as last year; in some cases lower rentals will, it is thought, have to be accepted. No particularly unusual incidents of the fitting have been under observation. As has been stated, wet weather has been a not unusual accompaniment of May the first's activities. Of course some humorous occasions might be told of as, for instance, one in which the father of the family was seen busily transporting the family canary in its cage, whilst the lady of the house was handling a table, not a heavy one, it is true, but many times heavier than the father's burden. Another little incident may be mentioned, in passing, where a small dog was transferring a teddy bear to its new home. The latter was rather large and quite a mouthful for the inquisitive canine. On the whole moving day was not unusually exciting, but there are scores who are glad to know that, under ordinary circumstances, it doesn't occur more than once a year.

THANKSGIVING FOR BRAVERY OF CANADIANS

Prayer prepared by Rev. Dr. Morison used in Carleton church last evening.

O Jesus Christ, the Captain of the Hosts of the Mighty, Who art daily calling us to take up the Cross and follow Thee: We thank Thee for our heroic soldiers who, in the terrible night battle, were brave even unto death, and who have laid down their lives for us all. May Thy Divine blessing rest upon their perfect sacrifice, and grant that by their noble example all our self-seeking may be chastened and may we eagerly claim the right to make every needed personal sacrifice for our King and Empire that the abiding welfare of our fellow men may be promoted and Thy Kingdom advanced. Amen.

A stillness that could be felt swept over the worshippers that sat in subdued silence in the First Presbyterian church, West Side, last night when at the conclusion of a most touching tribute to the heroism of our Canadian soldiers now at the front the Reverend Dr. Morison repeated the above prayer which he had prepared for the use of all who might find in its words an expression of their desires as their thoughts wandered far away to the blood-red trenches of Europe where our lads have by their bravery not only covered themselves with glory, but have also nobly maintained the reputation for intrepidity and heroism of the sons of Canada.

Speaking from the words in Ephesians in which the apostle describes the whole armor of God, the Doctor, with moving eloquence, described the magnificent gallantry of our soldier boys whose valor in recapturing the guns has evoked the praise of the world, and said that by such an act was revealed what was the moral quality of the men who have gone to fight our battles at the front.

In the course of a thoughtful sermon upon the spiritual armor supplied by the Christian religion in its relation to the peace of the world the preacher pointed out that whenever the various states or nations of the world decided to accept the principles and ideals and laws of the Christian religion, not only as binding upon the individual, but also upon the state at that time, and not until then would there be peace upon earth. This indeed Savoranora had attempted in Florence, John Calvin in Geneva, and Oliver Cromwell in England, and while their attempts were not entirely successful the failure was not due to the inherent lack of Christianity but to the fact that never yet has any state been willing to adopt its precepts in their entirety and make them sovereign in the life of the Nation.

SAILOR DROWNED IN HALIFAX HARBOR

Attempted to step from one schooner to another and fell into water.

Halifax, May 2.—William G. Peters, one of the crew of the La Hare fishing schooner Minnie M. Mosher, was drowned in the harbor last Saturday night. To reach his vessel he had to cross the deck of another schooner, and in doing so he slipped and fell between the vessels in the harbor. His cries for help aroused the crew of his own vessel, who rushed on deck and made every effort to save him, but without success. He belonged to Rockdale, C. B. His father now resides here.

NFLD. TROOPS HAVE ARRIVED AT LIVERPOOL

St. John's, Nfld., May 2.—The fourth military contingent from Newfoundland which left St. John's last Thursday week by the steamer Stephano for Halifax where they were transferred to the liner Missanab, for Liverpool, arrived safely there this evening, according to a message received by Governor Davidson tonight. This force of 250 men make the Newfoundland regiment now garrisoning Edinburgh Castle 1,250 strong, and another 250 are training here, and awaiting transport.

"CANADA'S SACRIFICE FOR THE EMPIRE"; A FORCEFUL SERMON

Rev. R. J. Haughton, in Congregational church, speaks eloquently of Self-sacrifice and Devotion of Canadian Soldiers—Many of 26th Battalion present.

About 500 men of the 26th Battalion, Congregational church, Union street, last evening in command of Lieut.-Col. J. L. McAvity, where an impressive sermon was preached by Rev. Ralph J. Haughton on "Canada's Sacrifice for the Empire." The church, which was crowded, was decorated with the flags of the Allies and purple. Mr. Haughton took as his text, 2 Samuel, 23—XV, to XVII, and said, in part:

"We are living in strenuous times. The very air that we breathe is heavy with wars and rumors of wars. But during the past few days the dreadfulness and reality of war have been brought home to us here in Canada as they have not before, probably since the fearful war began. We have scanned casualty lists before. But the lists published during the past few days, including so many Canadians, have brought home to us all the fact which has only been faintly understood by many—that Canada is at war."

From the Atlantic to the Pacific "In hundreds of Canadian homes tonight there are mothers, weeping for their children and will not be comforted, fathers bowed down with the weight of a great sorrow, and wives sorrowing for husbands whom they will not see in this world again."

"The text which I have chosen for this evening has come down to us from the time of the Jewish wars with the Philistines—always Israel's bitter enemies—David heated with the scorching sun, while scanning the hosts of his enemies, suddenly gave expression to a desire for a drink of water from the well at Bethlehem."

"Now David was living over again the old days, and when he wanted most, just then was a drink of the water from the old well of his boyhood days—just outside the gate of Bethlehem. Three of his mighty men heard the cry of his chief. Eager to serve him, they dashed through the host of the Philistines, drew the water from the old Bethlehem well and nothing less than death would have brought the water to David. But the water had gained a new sacredness in his eyes. It had cost a great effort. It had been procured by much self-sacrifice. He looks upon it as the life-blood of the men who had put their very lives in jeopardy for him. Reverently he pours it upon the ground—a libation to Jehovah. He would not drink thereof, but poured it out before the Lord."

An Example of Chivalry. "The story is a striking proof, I think, of the enthusiasm which David inspired in his followers—and a splendid example of noble chivalry,—which fears no danger, and shrinks from no sacrifice to serve the object of its devotion. But in the eyes of David the water had been procured at too great a cost. It had cost too much for even the King to drink it. The only fit thing to do with it was to devote it to God. And in giving it to God, doing with it himself, even when in his possession, David signified his own lofty conception of the value and sacredness of the water which had come to him through the heroism and self-sacrifice of the men who had risked their lives in order that they might serve their King. It symbolized too much sacrifice. It symbolized too much risk. It had become as the very life blood of the men who had jeopardized their lives for him."

"Too often we are inclined to think that the most vital and the deepest needs of men consist in food, and clothing and shelter. But they are the things that money cannot buy. Money could not buy the water from the well of Bethlehem that day so long ago when David longed for a drink from the old well. But it was secured—how? What secured it? Many heroism and devotion and self-sacrifice."

"The lesson is clear and plain. To satisfy the vital needs of life it costs if we are going to do any real service for our fellow men we must have the spirit which counts not the cost, and which swings itself into the great conflict of life with something of the devotion and the abandon of the men of Bethlehem. It must have been with the same dash and spirit, and devotion and abandon and heroism, that the officers and men of Canada's First Contingent attacked the German forces and saved the day for the British Empire and the allied armies. That is what we infer from the splendid tribute to the Canadian forces which came from their field marshal when he said: 'Their conduct was magnificent throughout.' It was the old Balaclava spirit rising up again to conquer and to win, and every Canadian must have felt a great thrill of pardonable pride rising up in his heart when he read the official report from the war office in London which said: 'The Canadians' gallantry and determination undoubtedly saved the situation.'

The King and General French. "And then who did not feel a still greater pride if possible when the splendid message from the King to the Minister of Militia was published: Buckingham Palace, April 25th, 'Congratulations you most warmly on the splendid and gallant way in which the Canadian division has fought during the last two days north of Ypres. Sir John French says their conduct was magnificent throughout. The Dominion will be justly proud. George.'

"It is in all our hearts tonight I feel sure, to honor the bravery and commend the self-sacrifice of our brothers, and I would take occasion to welcome the gallant commanding officer of the 26th Battalion and his magnificent body of men to this service commensurate of the heroism of our fellow soldiers. I am pleased to see so many members of the 26th N. B. Battalion here this evening to unite with this church in honoring the splendid heroism of our fellow citizens and soldiers whose conduct was so magnificent in the terrible battle at Ypres."

"In a great many Canadian homes there is a great sorrow tonight. In others there is great anxiety lest the news from the war office brings sorrow to them. And so, while we are proud of the chivalry displayed by the Canadian forces by means of which the victory was won though so many lost their lives and hundreds more are in hospitals tonight, let us not forget to ask God that His Divine Grace may be given to all in our land who mourn this Holy Sabbath Day."

"In these days when we sometimes think that the practical structure of which all true, real life is made, is crushed and neglected in the worship of the god of pleasure and avaricious desire. In these days when we are often tempted to believe that the majority of men allow their business cares, and the smoke of the shop to destroy the best elements of life, and we seem to be living in a very riot of materialism—it is the deeds of heroism and self-sacrifice such as those which we honor and revere tonight in the courts of the Lord's house that inspire us all to higher and nobler and better living—and bring to us all a new and larger vision of life as well."

"We rejoice in our liberty tonight because we inherit it from men and from generations who earned it for us—and who paid for it by their sufferings and their blood. The price they paid was paid in life, and the British Empire has endured and carried to others the blessings of a Christian civilization because of a great army of noble, patriotic men who fought our battles for victory and liberty—for us who are their heirs. And over in Flanders the other day, our own Canadian boys nobly fought, and suffered, and even died that poor bleeding Belgium might be soothed, and healed, and liberated, that France might cast off the oppressor, that the British Empire might be saved—and that we might live and continue to be free, and that still the song might be sent with joy: 'Rule Britannia—Britannia rules the waves, Britons never, never, never shall be slaves.'"

"It is reported that Col. Buell has said: 'There was no faltering among them when they were ordered to advance, though all knew this meant immediate casualties.' A splendid tribute surely to the worth and valor of the Canadian volunteer soldier."

A War For Progress. "Proud as Canada may well be tonight for the splendid part she took the other day at Ypres in the defence of the Empire—yet prouder still should we be to know that this present war, like the other great wars in which England has been engaged, is in the line of human progress, and waged for principle and liberty and democracy and Christianity. Prouder still should we be to remember that the dear fellows who fell in the battle near Ypres fell for the freedom of Belgium and for the freedom of France, and for the democratic sovereignty and freedom of the British Empire. They have proved indeed that the age of chivalry is not yet dead, and tonight we would bring our tribute of admiration to the graves of the noble fellows who sprang not from the supreme sacrifice, the sacrifice of their lives. Every time that we think of our freedom, and every time that we consider the blessings of democracy, will these blessings enhance in value when we remember the heroism and the sacrifices of our comrades who hurled themselves against the armies of German oppression, and German brutality, and German Kaiserism, and kept them from advancing. And if necessary, thank God, thousands and thousands more are willing to go forth that de-democracy may be upheld and defended and established, wide as the earth, and deep as the sea.

"Let us not forget tonight that our English history has been one long war of emancipation, and we are free, not because we made ourselves free, but because of a glorious ancestry who fought the battle out to the very death, achieving victory and liberty for us who are their heirs."

In all our struggles God has walked in the midst of the camp—the God of truth and justice. It was a great truth that Jesus enunciated when He said: 'Whosoever will save his life shall lose it—and whosoever shall lose his life for My sake the same shall find it.'

Self-Sacrifice. "It is a law based upon the great principle of self-sacrifice. It sets forth the supreme value of the law of self-sacrifice. The self-sacrifice of the Canadian volunteer soldiers who 'faltered not for a single moment, when ordered to advance'—was an evidence of the inherent greatness of men's souls."

"Fearful as this war is, brutal as German militarism is, we need not fear that we shall be defeated as long as we have men like that. And the British Empire has millions and millions of them. I cannot close this sermon unless I remind you of one who made the supreme sacrifice of Himself—for you and for me. I mean 'The Son of God who loved us and gave Himself for us.' Let us live for Him. Let us make Him the Captain of our salvation. Let us make Him the shepherd and bishop of our souls. Then we may go forth to any duties that life may bring to us, knowing that we shall be safe whatever happens. Let us go forth to the unknown future in the lofty spirit of service and self-sacrifice 'even as the Son of Man who came not to be ministered unto, but to minister, and to give His life a ransom for many.' And, as we go forth, no more fitting prayer can we offer than the prayer of that great man who left us a short time ago, Lord Roberts, a great soldier, full of honors, and noble in every sense. Here it is, the closing petition of the prayer which he distributed to his soldiers in the South African war: 'If it be Thy will, enable us to win victory for England, but above all grant us a better victory over temptation and sin, over life and death, that we may be more than conquerors through Him that loved us, and laid down His life for us—Jesus our Saviour—the Captain of the army of God.'

"In the beauty of the lilies, Christ was born across the Sea, With a glory in His bosom that transfigures you and me, As He died to make men holy, let us die to make men free."

This School Girl Had Bad Fainting Spells

Was Weak and Run Down, but Dr. Chase's Nerve Food Made Complete Cure.

The most critical time in a girl's life comes during the school age, when she is impelled by rivalry to put forth her best efforts in studying for examinations. At the time she should have healthful outdoor exercise and abundance of fresh air, to keep the blood pure and rich, she is confined by her studies. Is it any wonder that she becomes run down in health and suffers from headaches, indigestion, loss of appetite and spells of weakness or fainting?

The case described in this letter is a good illustration and you can read here the splendid results of using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to help through this critical period.

Mrs. H. Houston, Highland Grove, Ont., writes: "While attending school my daughter became weak and very much run down. She was frequently troubled with bad fainting spells and nothing we tried seemed to do her any good. We were advised to try Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and did so with most satisfactory results. I am pleased to tell you that after using five boxes of the Nerve Food she was completely cured and has no return of the fainting spells."

This statement is certified to by Mr. Hamilton Houston, Justice of the Peace. The reason Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is so effective in cases of this kind is because of its extraordinary blood-forming influence. By creating an abundance of rich, red blood, it strengthens the action of the heart, revitalizes the exhausted nerves and builds up the system in every way. The appetite is restored, digestion improves, you rest and sleep well, and the new vigor and energy is felt in every organ of the human body. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is doing wonders for men, women and children whose systems have become weak and run down. 50 cents a box, 6 for $2.50, all dealers or Edmondson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.
