TO TOBIQUE FORKS AND BACK.

The Trial of the Thief—Running the Rapids—The Country, the Settlers and the Crops—Roads, Bridges and Post Offices Wanted—Tibbets' Tactics.

Camp Nictor was very pleasantly located beneath the shadow of a grand old maple tree.

Mr. Tibbets' tactics were very judiciously applied, and far beyond the reach of neighboring trees.

From his dizzy height he could gaze far over the distant hills covered with splendid growth of hard-wood yet untouched by the wood-man's axe.

While up and down from the river's banks stretched wide belts of flat, and island after island, around which the swiftly flowing waters incessantly murmur, still in their perpetual wildness.

From the Forks the Tobique River is divided into four branches.

The Right Branch or Serpentine which has its source in Northumberland County.

The Middle Branch or the Manitowish, the Manxess, Sisson Branch and the Nictor or Little Tobique. The latter has its source near the head-waters of the Nepequin, Restigouche County.

A half was pleasantly spent in fishing and exploring. Scarcely a "salmon hole" or "bogen" within a couple of miles escaped our notice or from which we did not draw the speckled trout.

Even here, far from the haunts of civilization, we soon discovered to our regret that there abode no.

On our excursions up stream we discovered that a bark creel left sitting near the shore, containing several dozen choicest trout, was empty.

I would have charged the crime to some vagabondish biped but the Indian soon pointed out the unmistakable trail of a man who had taken advantage of our absence to replenish his larder.

Although far from being weary of fishing and camp life I had to realize that "time's up," and "about ship" for the return home.

The sensation of the run down the Tobique is as different from that of ascending as anything one can imagine.

Returning, you have the swift current in your favor, and with the aid of the paddles, the canoe makes splendid time.

The voyage up requires three days of unceasing labor with the pole, the return can be made in one day without exertion.

The sensation of running down the Tobique is as different from that of ascending as anything one can imagine.
