

Obstinate Coughs and Colds.

The Kind That Stick.

The Kind That Turn To Bronchitis.

The Kind That End In Consumption.

Consumption is, in thousands of cases, nothing more or less than the final result of a neglected cold. Don't give this terrible plague a chance to get a foothold on your system.

If you do, nothing will save you. Take hold of a cough or cold immediately by using

DR. WOOD'S NORWAY PINE SYRUP.

The first dose will convince you that it will cure you. Miss Hannah F. Fleming, New Germany, N.S., writes:—"I contracted a cold that took such a hold on me that my people thought I was going to die. Hearing how good Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup was, I procured two bottles and they effected a complete cure."

Price 25 cents per bottle. Do not accept substitutes for Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. Be sure and insist on having the genuine.

Canadian Love a Lord.

"There appears to be one temptation in democracy," said Mr. Coughlin in his talk at the Canadian Club in Toronto, "which democrats cannot resist, and that is to be slapped on the shoulder by a real live English lord. It is sometimes said that that treaty was floated through on champagne. That statement is based on a casual remark in a letter from Lord Elgin's secretary, in which he said that champagne in the hands of a skillful diplomat was not without its use."

HOW PNEUMONIA STARTS.

You catch a little cold to-day, by to-morrow it has reached the throat, next day the lungs are affected, and you, with your head used, "Catarthone," which kills colds in five minutes. In the first place Catarthone soothes the irritated membranes and relieves congestion, then it cuts out the phlegm and destroys the germs. It enables the blood to retain a natural supply of oxygen, lung-food, and vitality. In any cough, bronchitis or lung affection it's guaranteed to positively cure. Decline any substitute for "Catarthone."

Against the Veil.

BEWARE OF OINTMENTS FOR CATARRH THAT CONTAIN MERCURY.

As mercury will destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescription from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is far too large to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is sold everywhere, and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co. Testimonials free. Sold by Druggists. Price 75c. per bottle.

Swallowing Stars Mean Bad Weather. I have constantly observed at sea that steadily burning stars indicated calm, fair weather, and the more they twinkled the worse the weather was likely to be. The forecast given by this variation in scintillating was almost invariably correct in the high latitudes, and it failed sometimes in the tropics.

JUDED & HARD SWELLING.

Mr. Gas E. Geroux, writing from Ambrose, tells how he was injured in a lumber camp. "A heavy log rolled against my leg and I was laid up with stiffness and a hard swelling. When I applied Polson's Nerviline I got relief. A few rubbings with this good liniment cured me. In the back, Nerviline is indispensable; it cures neuralgia, colds, rheumatism and internal disorders, too. No person can afford to be without Nerviline. Useful for all internal and external pain. Large bottles 25c. at all dealers."

THE NAVY OF BRITAIN

THREE OF ITS STRONG FLEETS IN WAY OF RUSSIAN BALTIC FLEET.

Ready for Emergencies—Admiral Fisher, Commander-in-Chief of British Navy—Vice-Admiral Beresford, of the Channel Fleet—The Baltic Fleet—Strength of the Squadron Which Attacked the British Fishermen.

The British Admiralty as soon as it learned of the attack of the Russian Baltic fleet on the Hull fishing vessels in the North Sea sent orders to the commanders of the Channel, Mediterranean and home fleets directing mutual support and co-operation. Further orders looking to readiness for action followed. The British navy is composed of eleven squadrons, and the three mentioned are among the strongest. They are available for immediate use should the British desire to interfere with the progress of the Russian squadron or wish to use the warships for the protection of shipping against a possible repetition of the North Sea incident. The three fleets are dispersed on or near the coast of the British Isles, and the route of the Russians to the Orient.

The Mediterranean fleet contains twelve battleships, while the Russian Baltic fleet has but seven. It also has fourteen cruisers and a large number of torpedo boats destroyed. Until recently it was under command of Admiral Sir John Arbuthnot Fisher, K.C.B., who brought it up to a high state of discipline. Admiral Fisher about a year ago became senior naval lord of the Admiralty and as such active commander in chief of the entire British navy. He is sometimes called "The Lord Kitchener of the navy." His father was a captain in the Seventy-eighth Highlanders, who settled in Ceylon and married a high class Cingalese woman, and thus he has Oriental blood in his veins. He is sixty-three years of age and has been in the navy since he was twelve, serving in the Crimean War, the China War of 1859 and 1860 and in the Egyptian War of 1882, in which he commanded the Indefatigable at the bombardment of Alexandria. One of his officers once said, "His will is iron, and his nerves are as hard as Krupp steel." This was illustrated when he was at Lisbon some years ago with a squadron and strained relations existed between Germany and England. Just as the English fleet was leaving a German fleet of twice its strength entered the harbor and with the idea of impressing the Portuguese drew up in double line off the town. Fisher exchanged salutes and the led his vessels out of the harbor at full speed between the two German lines, with only twenty or thirty yards clear on either side. It was a dangerous maneuver, but he knew he could trust the discipline and skill of his squadron, and not a vessel swerved a yard from the wake of his flagship.

The Channel fleet, comprising six battleships and six cruisers, is under the command of Vice-Admiral Lord Charles William de la Poer Beresford, K.C.B. He, too, was at the bombardment of Alexandria, where he commanded the Conqueror, and with it rescued a British frigate which had gone aground right under the guns of the Marabout batteries, an exploit for which he received the sobriquet of "Condor Charlie." He is fifty-six years of age, was born in Ireland and has rendered eminent service as naval officer, author, member of Parliament and Commissioner to China of the British Chambers of Commerce.

Vice-Admiral Beresford and Admiral Fisher are not at all alike and do not get along well together. Admiral Fisher does not believe a naval officer should talk about the navy and has never been interviewed. Vice-Admiral Beresford says whatever he pleases, whenever he pleases and in Parliament has not hesitated to criticize the Lords of the Admiralty, his superior officers. Some years ago the Prince of Wales invited Lord Beresford to dinner. The bluff sailor did not care to go and sent this audacious message: "Can't come. Polite lie follows by mail."

When Russia's second Pacific squadron, known as the Baltic fleet, fired on peaceful British fishermen in chief command was Vice-Admiral Rojestvensky, and the squadron commanders were Rear Admirals Enquist and Volskoyan. Although the departure from Cronstadt, at the head of the gulf of Finland, took place about two months ago, the fleet on Oct. 21 had only reached a point about 200 miles off Hull, on the eastern coast of England, and thus had proceeded but a small part of the 15,000 marine miles it must traverse to reach the Yellow Sea. It was here that the attack on the fishing vessels occurred. It is well known to all seamen that the North Sea off the English coast is filled with fishing craft. The fishing industry is an important one, and it is estimated that close to 500 steam trawlers ply these waters engaged in taking fish. A recent estimate put the value of the annual product of the fleet at $13,000,000. The steam trawlers are a species of fishing vessel built in recent years, with hulls of steel and containing large refrigerating plants. They carry purse shaped nets with wide mouth, kept distended by a wooden spar, and are worked by powerful tackle and engines. Into these nets the fish are drawn by thousands. It was a fleet of these vessels upon which the Russian warships opened fire. The Baltic fleet is an armada compared with which that sent by Philip of Spain against England was but an insignificant and harmless force. It is composed for the most part of splendid fighting machines, though the ability of officers and men in handling them remains to be tested. It is said that very few of the officers, engineers or men behind the guns have felt the shock and stress of a genuine naval battle. There are seven battleships, the tonnage of each ranging from 10,000 up to nearly 14,000. There are two armored cruisers, two protected cruisers of the first class, one of the second and three of the third. There are twelve destroyers in the fleet, of 350 tons each, with a speed of from twenty-six to twenty-seven knots. There are also nine auxiliary cruisers, a hospital ship, repair ship and colliers, the fleet comprising nearly fifty vessels.

A few facts about Vice-Admiral Rojestvensky's flagship, the Knaiz Suvaroff, may be given to illustrate the character of the battleships in the fleet. The Suvaroff was built in 1902 and has a tonnage of 13,616. It has four twelve-inch breechloading guns, twelve six-inch quick firing guns, twenty twelve-pounder quick firing guns, twenty three-pounders and one one-pounder. The seven battleships cost an average of $5,500,000 each, or nearly $50,000,000 for this part of the fleet, the cost of all the vessels in the armada being placed at about $85,760,000.

Compared with the Channel, Mediterranean and home squadrons of the British fleet, now practically surrounding it, the Baltic fleet is a mere pygmy. The Channel squadron, under Vice-Admiral Beresford, consists of six battleships and six cruisers. The Mediterranean fleet, under Admiral Sir Compton Dunscombe, is composed of twelve battleships, fourteen cruisers and twenty-four torpedo boats and torpedo boat destroyers and the home squadron numbers eight battleships and five cruisers, a total of twenty-six battleships and twenty-five cruisers, as opposed to the seven battleships and eight cruisers of the Baltic fleet.

Japanese Conception of Poetry. A Western poet wandering through a pine forest at night and suddenly perceiving in the utter darkness a gleam of silver light might compare the moon shining to some fairy palace with glittering window panes—in short, to some object of his experience or imagination. The Japanese poet, on the other hand, would compare the glimmering light to "a moonlit crag of Fujiyama."

The Japanese always remains an observer. He never becomes one with nature. He does not possess the faculty of endowing inanimate objects with life. To invest clouds and woods with human thoughts and desires, as, for instance, Shelley has done, seems bald and meaningless to him, and such a sentence as "Aurora, veiling herself in clouds, like a blushing girl," he would consider in very bad taste. He looks at the world with the eyes of an ideal realist, or, rather, of an impressionist. Life passes like the dissolving views of a magic lantern, showing one beautiful landscape after the other, each one containing sufficient material for an exquisite vignette.—Readers.

A Curious Legend.

Easyby Abbey, the ruins of which lie close to the river Swale, a short distance from Richmond, in Yorkshire, England, is the home of a curious legend, says Photography. One of the main walls of the building is cracked and toppling, but has not yet fallen to the ground. Nor do the natives expect it to do so, at least not until it receives the impulse which it is said to await. For a tradition relates that the wall, when it does fall, will bury in its ruins a newly married couple, and as the tale is well known the chance of a honeymoon pair resting beneath its shade is remote.

Study of National Eugenics.

Francis Galton recently endowed by London University a fellowship for the promotion of the study of "national eugenics," which is defined as "the study of the agencies under social control that may improve or impair the racial qualities of future generations either physically or mentally."

A man talks about owning his business. But as a matter of fact his business owns him. His whole life is regulated by the demands of the business. The time at which he rises, his breakfast hour, the time given to sleep, are all determined by business obligations. He rushes through lunch because he "can't spare the time from business" to eat leisurely. He won't take a rest because he is needed at the store or office. He is in fact an absolute slave to business. The results which follow this slavery are to be seen on every hand. Men dyspeptic, irritable, nervous, with aching heads and hollow eyes sit at the desk or stand behind the counter until they collapse in a fit of sickness, or are taken away by heart failure. Those who cannot escape the exactions of business will find a friend in Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It strengthens the stomach, increases the action of the blood-making glands, increasing the vitality and vigor. It makes men strong and prevents those business breakdowns which so often terminate fatally.

THE WORLD OF FASHION.

Loose Bolero Costumes—Some Black and White Check Materials.

Among the spring styles for street wear the loose bolero certainly leads. It is made with or without sleeve seams, and in the former fashion it gives the effect of a loose cape partly tucked to form the sleeves. These loose boleros are decorated with strap trimmings and tiny buttons. They are worn with very full skirts either laid in box plaits or inch wide tucks. In both cases these flare from the knees downward.

Black and white checked materials in wool, linen and silk are among the smartest suit materials. They are trimmed with buffons either in green or steel, and they are worn with extra straw hats trimmed with black and white or with grass green toque plumes. The parasol matches. Pongee coats are ultra smart, especially when shirred in quite full and trimmed with touches of green.

Changeable taffeta in opalescent shades is charming under artificial light. Many of these changeable silks are made into evening wraps, and a favorite model has a circular yoke trimmed with the old fashioned pinked out ruffles. Others have shawl effects of fine lace and the ever fashionable lining of accordion plaited chiffon.

The picture shows one of the latest street costumes. It is made of red mohair trimmed with bands of passementerie and tiny black velvet ribbon. The hat is of cerise straw trimmed with lace.

White coats share with those of pongee popular fancy this summer. They are beautiful made of fine cloth and having a pelerine collar edged with bold braid and hanging tassels. Shantung silk is trimmed with black velvet and quantities of gold and silver braid.

I was almost starved."

"I tried all kinds of pills and medicines and also used a stomach pump several times, but all to no account till I started to use Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets. The first box of them gave me so much relief that I got four more. Now I am free of pain and am gaining in weight, health and strength."
