SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTH WEST LAND REGULATIONS

The sole head of a family or any male over 18 years old, who was at the commencement of the present war, and has since conducted himself as a British subject or a subject of an allied or neutral country, may homestead a quarter-section of available Dominion Land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta. Applicant must appear in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for District. Entry by proxy may be made in certain cases. Residence—Six months residence upon said cultivated land in each of three years.

In certain districts a homesteader may secure an adjoining quarter-section as pre-emption. Price $3.00 per acre. Duties—Reside six months in each of three years after securing homestead patent and cultivate 50 acres extra. May obtain pre-emption at once as homestead pre-empt on certain conditions.

A settler after obtaining homestead patent, if he cannot secure a pre-emption, may take a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price $100 per acre. Must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate 60 acres and erect a house worth $200.

Hours of entry may count time of pre-emption or residence dates under certain conditions.

When Dominion Lands are advertised or posted for entry, returned soldiers who have served overseas and have been honorably discharged, receive one day priority in applying for entry local Agents Office (but not Sub-Agency). Discharge papers must be presented to Agent.

N.B.—Homestead publications of this advertisement will not be paid for.

KORNILOFF A BRILLIANT COMMANDER

Russia's Greatest Military Genius Has Had Rapid Rise To Fame

WAS ONCE PRISONER

Escaped From Austrians Only Through Sacrifice Of a Companion

Gen. Korniloff has lost no time in applying the “blood and iron” tonic so sadly needed by the Russian armies. He is said to have turned his artillery on one division that showed cowardice. The armies under him will have either to fight the Germans or fight each other, but Korniloff is determined that they shall fight. This brilliant soldier, who was almost unheard of outside of Russia until a few weeks ago, constitutes with Kernesky, the hope of the Allies that Russia will continue to do her share of the common task. He has the confidence of his men and the confidence of the loyal element everywhere in him. He is the most brilliant of the generals who, under Brusiloff conducted the sensational campaign last summer. His own recent drive in Galicia resulted in the capture of 35,000 Teutons, and according to the usual average, this means that 100,000 were put out of action.

A Famous Ancestor

Korniloff is in his 47th year. He was born in Siberia, and it is said in a log cabin. From this it must not be inferred that he belonged to the peasant class, for the log cabin style of architecture is popular in Siberia. Korniloff comes of a fighting family. For he is a grandson of Vice-Admiral Korniloff, one of the most illustrious of Russian sailors. It was Vice-Admiral Korniloff who was entrusted with the defence of Sebastopol in the Crimean war. In the neck of the bay protecting this port he sank the five warships under his command, and taking his men ashore, laid the foundations of that defence which held out for nearly a year against the combined cannonade of the British and French guns. Subsequently the Admiral died as the result of a wound incurred on Malakoff hill.

The present general was destined for the army almost from birth, and after passing through the Siberian Cadet Corps, he picked up one scholarship after another that made his path easy and plainly marked him out for an unusual military career.

Fought Under Kuropatkin

He obtained a commission in the Siberian army, which was at that time a distinct organization from the Russian European army and the army of the Caucasus; but when the war between Russia and Japan broke out the Siberian army was taken over by Kuropatkin. The young officer advanced rapidly, and to him fell the dangerous task of fighting rearward actions, as Kuropatkin put into execution his famous strategy of “hurling them on.” So well did Korniloff discharge his duties, that at the end of the war he was awarded the Cross of St. George of the Fourth Degree, and presented with a golden sword. His next appointment was to the Russian military staff at Peking, where he continued his studies and incidentally acquired the Chinese language. It might be remarked that the Russian gift of tongue is brilliantly exemplified in Korniloff, who speaks most European languages, besides Persian and Chinese.

In First Russian Drive

He was a brigadier-general when the present war broke out, and was put in command of an infantry division, the same one which has won great fame in this war, the division of the Fourth Degree, called by the enemy the “Iron Division.” This division took part in the memorable sweep through the Carpathians under Brusiloff and Brusiloff in September, 1914. The Russians held their positions through the winter, but by the time the snow began to melt the shortage of ammunition had become acute. Battery commanders who used more than half a dozen shells a day were called on for explanations. The Russian position was undoubtedly well known in Berlin, and so Mackensen seized the opportunity for his famous drive. When he began at least one Russian division, the “Iron,” had penetrated the Dukla Pass, and had advanced some 20 miles along the plains of Hungary. Had there been plenty of ammunition the whole Russian army would have streamed after it, and the end of the war would have been in sight.

Captured by Austrians

However there was nothing for it but retreat, and again Korniloff distinguished himself by the desperate delaying actions he fought. He hung on so long that on April 28 a part of his division was cut off and captured. Korniloff was made prisoner and sent to an internment camp about 500 miles from the Russian frontier. Here he remained until last September, when he escaped with the help of a Bohemian soldier; this man gave his life for Korniloff, for he threw himself between the fleeing general and his pursuers, and his own body stopped the bullets that otherwise would have brought Korniloff down. He wandered on foot for three weeks, living for the most part on herbs and wild berries. On returning to headquarters he at once resumed command of a division, but was summoned to Petrograd to take charge of the military garrison when the revolution broke out. Sympathetic though he was with the revolutionary movement, he saw that the action of the Workmen's and Soldiers' Committee was bound to destroy the discipline of the army, so he resigned, and begged to be given a command at the front. He was sent to Brusiloff, whose armies still retained most of their discipline, and at the beginning of the present month began the sensational advance toward Hal-
