A Unique Character.

Rufus Story, a peculiar man and a New York merchant, daringly manipulated the coffee and spice markets in the middle of the nineteenth century. On one occasion when he owned a large quantity of coffee the market rapidly declined. His ruin was predicted. "What are you going to do?" I asked him.

"Why," he said, with a shrewd wink, "I shall buy several thousand bags more and steady the market."

He came out of this speculation and almost every other in which he embarked with success. He commenced business in butter and eggs and became the master of the spice market of the world. Once he imported an entire cargo of pepper. He had only a dim idea of where coffee and spice came from, and usually spoke of the places as "way off." His books were kept by single entry, as he refused to understand any other system. A small paper memorandum carried in the lining of his high hat was his chief reliance in regard to his business affairs. He was one of the founders of the National Broadway bank.—Town Topics.

Wanted—Two Good Murderers.

Some curious letters passed between Garrick and a man named Stone. The latter was employed to get recruits for the low parts of the drama, and one night he wrote to Garrick, "Sir, the bishop of Winchester is getting drunk at the Bear and swears he will not play tonight."

At first sight this seems peculiar conduct for a bishop, but it should be explained that the communication only refers to the man engaged to take that character in the play of "Henry VIII."

On another occasion Garrick wrote to Stone: "If you can get me two good murderers I will pay you handsomely, particularly the shouting fellow who keeps the apple stall on Tower hill. The cut in his face is just the thing. Pick me up an alderman or two for 'Richard' if you can, and I have no objection to treat with you for a comely mayor."—Chambers' Journal.

Blight & Fielder, as contractors, are a little fast. I can prove it by the speed with which they are putting down the St. Clair St. pavement. They have already almost reached Stark's grocery and expect to have the street completed in a couple of weeks.

PITY'S 'EM.

I pity those unfortunate Grits who would like to be Canadians—who would like to express their approbation of Lord Dundonald's conduct; but feel obliged to sacrifice their personal preference in the interests of party.—Hamilton Spectator.

...SOCIETY...

VAN INGEN—MACNABB.

A quiet wedding but one of interest to Maple City society in which the bride was always a favorite, was solemnized at the residence of Sheriff Gemmill, the home of the bride, at one o'clock to-day, when William H. Van Ingen, collector of customs, Woodstock, was united in marriage to Miss Agnes MacNabb, only daughter of the late Donald MacNabb, of this city. The room was darkened and charmingly decorated in honor of the occasion. The bride was assisted by her youngest cousin, Miss Marion Gemmill, maid of honor. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. A. H. MacGillivray, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, in the presence of only the very immediate relatives of the bride. Miss MacNabb was attired in her travelling dress of navy blue with hat to match and presented a very pretty picture. After a splendid wedding dinner Mr. and Mrs. Van Ingen left on the 3.30 C. P. R. express for Montreal, where they will embark on the Lake Manitoba for England. They will be gone about two months. Mrs. Van Ingen was the recipient of many pretty and expensive gifts from her many friends and relatives in this city.
