Vancouver, this country must come into competition with the most powerful trust in the world—the United Tates Steel Corporation. Under such circumstances, it is indeed the part of wisdom to be wary of doing anything to disturb the present satisfactory development of the Canadian iron industry or bring about conditions which might have a bad effect upon the other progressive industries of the country. Canada is now in the midst of an era of prosperity and nothing that might retard its advancement should be attempted of these great religious bodies.

Mr. Armstrong held that an outlay of something like $10,000,000 would enable the Government to acquire all the commercial telegraph lines of the country, and for $13,000,000 or $13,000.
