the other confederate princes and free towns for their opinion, I am, with the assurance of my highest consideration and friendship, your royal majesty's friendly brother and cousin.

ROME. A correspondent of the Armonia, makes the following calculation upon the Roman Plebs:— A friend of ours, who was informed of the number of votes needed to have been given in Rome on the 2nd of last October, and who compared the length of time assigned for the voting with the number of urns appointed for receiving the votes, made a calculation as to how many persons a minute could have given their vote.

Table with columns: Name, Votes. Lists names and their respective vote counts.

The time appointed for the voting was 10 hours, viz., from 8 a. m. to 6 p. m. The number of urns was 12 in all.

Now, this at once seems impossible and the more so when we consider the 10 hours unintermittedly ought to have put their votes into each of the 12 urns.

Now, it is a known fact that for the first and even for the second hour of voting in the morning, the number of voters at most of the booths was very small.
