Many old imposts, on the contrary, from which the country has been lately lieved by the Imperial Government, its tentative, cautious, and gradual proaches towards the economical proper of Free-trade, will probably not be revived. In England, the continuance and duplication of the Income-tal and cartain page dues on foreign bills of and certain new dues on foreign bills exchange drawn abroad (dues to b levied in a superior method; which suggested to the Chancellor of the chequer, we are informed, by a Mr. Pace, of the City) constitute the chief fiscal peculiarities of our great war budget.

THE SPARK OF TEMPER.

The fire was busing brightly of a farmer's hearth—note quiet coal fire, in a tidy little black grae—no, this was an old-fashioned brick Isarth, and great logs of wood were piles on it one upon another, crackling and slazing. Among them was one of those logs which, for some reason or other—it is lard to say why—are always spitting outsparks all around; a log not at all safe leave; and, unhappily Susan, the farmer's wife, having been called out all safe leave; and, unhappily Suan, the farme's wife, having been called out sudden, had never given one look at the fire. Spit! spit! went the log, and out fie a great spark!—never mind, no harm with appen; it has fallen into a large basin awater. There is a moment's hissing, as the clear, cold water did not understand such a figury visitor, so all unlike itself; but such a fiery visitor, so all unlike itself; but the water has prevailed, the spark is quite extinguished. Spit! spit! goes the log-out flies another spark! Where will this light? It has fallen into a wisp of dry hay, with which Susan was going to pack a basket. The hay is so dry it catches like tinder. O, what a blaze! it is well it is brick floor, and that nothing else is near, or the whole house might have been on fire. Susan must make haste home; but Sesan does not come home, and now it is worse than ever, for the very next spark that flies than ever, for the very next spark that flies out lights on the farmer's gunpowder flash, carelessly left open on the table. There is not much powder, but enough to do great mischief, for, of course, it explodes at once, and crash goes the window, part of the side of the house is blown out, and the rose, which climbed up it, torn down. It will take many days, and many pounds too, to repair the damage that spark has done, and years must pass before the traces of it are altogether gone. altogether gone.

You will be more than usually happy, my friends, if you never come across a crack-ling log, spitting its sparks of fire. I do not mean a log of wood on the hearth, but one of those fiery tempers whose angry words fly like sparks all around. Notice, the mischief done depended not only on the spark, but on the place where it fell. When an angry word falls on a gentle, loving heart, there will be a moment's pain—all the sharper because such words are so strange there, but it will not last: by one of those soft answers that turn away wrath-by some good-tempered merriment, turning aside ill-will-by some means or other, the loving heart will conquer—there will be no flame there! But if it falls on an irritable temper, ready, like the dry hay, to take fire at anything, what a blaze there will be! it will be well if such a one is alone at the moment, for if others are near, the flame will be in danger of running round rapidly. Do not boast of having too high a spirit to brook a word of reproach—it is dangerous to be dry hay when sparks are flying! But, above all, do not be a flask of gunpowder; do not join malice and revenge to a hast temper; do not let every stray spark that falls on you lead to an explosion, or boast that none ever injured you without reaping consequences they rue, perhaps, for long years. The gunpowder is mighty, but it is fearful—Q, hateful power!—Rev. E. H.

The present critical state of European affairs renders these publications unusually interesting. They occupy a middle ground between the hastily written news items, crude speculations and flying rumours of the daily Journal, and the ponderous Tome of the future historian, written after the living interest and excitement of the great political events of the time shall have passed away. It is to these Periodicals that readers must look for the only reliable history of current events, and as such, in addition to their well-established literary, scientific, and theological character, we urge them upon the consideration of the reading pablic.
