

Public Utility Earnings.

A practical demonstration of the fact that the earnings of public utility or public service corporations such as telegraph and telephone companies are not affected by depressions in trade, was evidenced in the great panic of 1907 and depression the following year. While, on all sides, the earnings of railways and industrial companies showed a marked falling off, the Nova Scotia Telephone Company, now owned by the Maritime Telephone Company, showed an increase of $16,000.

This is one of the reasons why we are recommending an investment in Maritime Telegraph and Telephone Company 6 p.c. Preferred Stock. It shows stability of earnings, the best kind of assurance that dividends will be paid regularly.

The par value of the Maritime Telegraph and Telephone Company Preferred Stock is $10. We offer a block in lots to suit purchasers. Prices and other particulars will be gladly furnished upon request.

Dear Sir,—
When acknowledging receipt of the Company's cheque for my matured Endowment Policy No. 24937, I desire to avail myself of the opportunity to express my satisfaction with the outcome of my investment.

The policy was payable to me at age 60, with ten premiums of $48.00 each. The return under it is as follows:

|----------------------------|------------|
| Sum assured | $1,000.00 |
| Dividends added | $146.94 |
| Total amount payable | $1,146.94 |
| Deduct total premiums paid | $480.00 |
| | $666.94 |

That I should have insurance protection free for all these years and now have over twice the amount of my premiums returned to me in cash is a most satisfactory outcome and I heartily congratulate you on it.

Yours very truly,
GEO. ROSS.

I Don't Feel Like It.

By RUTH CAMERON.

At ten o'clock the lady of leisure threw down the waft on which she was working, with a gesture of fretful impatience.

"It's no use," she said, "I simply can't do this to-day. I don't feel like it. I will have to wait until some other time."

Whereupon she picked up a newspaper, glanced over it idly for a few minutes, laid it down and went into the bathroom where she rubbed some of her new cold cream on a semi-visible red spot on her chin and inspected the effect in the mirror, called up two or three friends on the telephone, read a magazine story, that one of them recommended, looked at the clock and found the morning gone and lunch time at hand.

A few doors down the street a dressmaker was working. She was a woman who loved the great outdoors, for passionately, and just about ten o'clock, when the sun burst through the clouds in sudden splendor, it seemed to her that she must throw down her work and go out into the woods. Her distaste for her task was just as strong as the other woman's but she had to do it, and so she did it; and lunch time found her with a good half day's work accomplished.

"All that ought to be done can be done" is a great truth.

How many times the worker who has no absolute compulsion behind him says "I can't," "I don't feel like it."

"I'm not in the mood for that work," etc., etc., when the worker who must work simply goes ahead and gets the thing done.

Of course there are times when we feel in just the right mood and can do better work than at other times, but the more we pamper ourselves, the more we give in to these moods the oftener they come. Man is naturally lazy. To be sure, almost anyone will work at the thing he feels like doing at the moment he feels like doing it; but the capability for patient persevering, unrelenting effort is a developed and not a natural quality in the human animal.

Do not think I fail to appreciate that there are times when one gets the best results by giving up a piece of work over which one has grown stale and nervous, working on something else for a while, or if possible, going out for a breath of fresh air, and then coming back with recreated energy for the difficult task. I most emphatically appreciate that fact, and I think there are many people who would accomplish more with less use of energy if they knew when to let go on themselves. But, on the other hand, I think there are a great many who are too easy on themselves, who think "I don't feel like it" is equivalent to "I can't." "All that ought to be done can be done" is the motto they need.

Of course, I don't know which class you belong to, reader friend. That's for you to decide. Here's hoping the over-energetic people won't take the suggestion that's meant for the opposite class, and vice-versa.

Passenger Train Crashes Into Caboose of Freight—Conductor, Brakeman and Flagman Killed.

Pittsburg, Jan. 29.—A Pennsylvania passenger train from New York to Pittsburg, was wrecked near Conemaugh, Pa., to-day, when it ran into a freight train going west. Three members of the crew were killed.

The passenger train was running at a high rate of speed when, as it rounded a curve, the engineer saw the lights of the freight directly in front.

He applied the emergency brakes, but the heavy engine crashed into the caboose killing A. L. Richie, conductor, of Youngwood, Pa.; A. Leyheiter, brakeman, of Youngwood, Pa., and H. C. Pell, flagman, Altoona, Pa., and injuring H. W. Dodd, brakeman, Youngwood, Pa.

The engine and the mail car on the passenger train were derailed, blocking three tracks. Passengers were tossed about by the force of the collision, but none was seriously hurt. A heavy fog hung over the valley and the engineer of the passenger train was unable to see the signals of the automatic block system with which the division is equipped.

Cleanses Your Hair Makes It Beautiful

It becomes thick, wavy, lustrous and all dandruff disappears—Hair stops coming out.

Surely, try a "Danderine Hair Cleanser" if you wish to immediately double the beauty of your hair. Just moisten a cloth with Danderine and draw it carefully through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; this will cleanse the hair of dust, dirt or any excessive oil—in a few minutes you will be amazed. Your hair will be wavy, fluffy and abundant and possess an incomparable softness, lustre and luxuriance.

Besides beautifying the hair, one application of Danderine dissolves every particle of dandruff; invigorates the scalp, stopping itching and falling hair.

Danderine is to the hair what fresh showers of rain and sunshine are to vegetation. It goes right to the roots, invigorates and strengthens them. Its exhilarating, stimulating and life-producing properties cause the hair to grow long, strong and beautiful.

You can surely have pretty, soft, lustrous hair, and lots of it, if you will just get a 25-cent bottle of Kewington's Danderine from any drug store or toilet counter and try it as Edmonton, Alta., Feb. 2.—John Gentile, of this city, tried to chase what he thought was a dog out of a chicken coop in his back yard yesterday and because the animal refused he is better off by $5,000 as it proved the finest female specimen of genuine black fox taken this year, according to fox experts buying for eastern firms here. Forty minutes after capturing it he was offered $5,000 but is holding for $7,000.

At the House

The Bills respecting Patents and the Aliens' Act were read a third time, passed and sent to the Legislative Council for concurrence.

The Bill respecting the Exhibition of Advertisements was passed without amendment.

The Dental Act Bill passed without further amendment.

The House resolved itself into Committee of the Whole on the Bill relating to Cruelty to Animals. A letter was read from the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, sent by the President of the Truckmen's Protective Union, asking that a clause be inserted in the Bill excluding boys of eighteen years from trucking and express driving. Messrs. Kent, Lloyd and Higgins contended that this was a matter for the Municipal Council to deal with. This opinion was accepted and the clause referred to was not included in the Act. A letter was also read about the weight of dogs.

In relation to the Bill on Pure Food the Premier said it would be difficult to make a uniform provision for sampling and testing as is done in the case of alcoholic drinks. The difficulty arose in cases of perishable food.

Mr. Lloyd suggested that the consideration of the matter be deferred in order to consult the English Acts dealing with the sampling of such seizures.

Mr. Kent pointed out that he had suggested only the sampling of only such foods as did not depreciate with keeping. The matter was deferred.

At this stage Mr. Coaker asked the Premier to produce the Advocate, as he had alleged sustained the Herald's charge about disparaging bishops and priests.

The Prime Minister read extracts from both papers. Here he put his foot in it as the extracts were not in accordance with each other and had entirely different meanings; but, said the Premier, the inference is there.

Mr. Coaker—He was very sorry to say that the Premier had not the manliness to say that the Herald had misquoted the Advocate, leaving out sentences, words and phrases and wrestling from the article meanings that it did not convey, putting on it a false construction, and all to damage political opponents. Bad enough as it was for a newspaper to do this, it was infinitely worse for the Prime Minister to use his place and influence in the House to bolster up such wrong doing. He pointed out that the paper the Premier was referring to was the first issue of the Advocate, dated Feb. 5th, 1910. He remarked who can deny that the earnings of the members are a source of income to men of church and state. He then went on to point out how he had been misrepresented by the Daily News and termed anarchist and socialist; but he wished the Herald, the News and everyone else to remember that he had as good religious principle as anybody in the community, and he was proud of the results achieved by the Advocate.

The Prime Minister found no fault in Mr. Coaker's rejoicing over the Advocate but would not admit that it had done its work north. He began to illustrate his remarks by figures, and it can be imagined by those who were not present how "logical" the Premier becomes when talking on figures, judging from past experience. He said out of 32,000 voters in all the northern districts only 15,000 voted for the Union and Liberal candidates, and half or a third of that number represented the Liberal vote. He said four years from now it would be different in the northern districts, as he knew of a number of men who were falling away from the Union.

Mr. Coaker—Men who were expelled from the Union and who did not vote for Union candidates. It is laid down in the Constitution plain, openly and above board, to every man before he joins the Union that he must support it, and no one is dragged into it by the throat. He said the Premier conveniently omitted to tell of the thousands of fishermen who did not vote at all on election day because they were engaged on the Reid Co's. railways, and of the many influenced by employment on various works in the public service. This was particularly applicable to Bay de Verde district.

Mr. Moulton—He said that the members on the Government side were called rogues, robbers, grafters and everything that was bad by the Advocate. The members on the opposition side were very suspicious. He did not mean those on the front row, but those on the back row, except Mr. Stone. He did not object to the Fishermen's Union as a union, but as a political machine. He had got something out of politics, but he had lost $150,000 by being a politician.

Mr. Jennings rose to defend himself in connection with the disparagement hurled at all the Union candidates by the previous speaker. He had never made a remark to reflect upon the personal character of any man in the House since the session opened. What he had said was wholly on the policy of the Government.

Mr. Coaker—The hon. member for Burgeo reiterated the insinuations that he made yesterday and throws insults at every member who sits on the back row of the Opposition. He (Mr. M.) had stated that he was not getting any money out of the Government, but would that hon. member tell us how much he is drawing and will draw out of the chest in connection with railway arbitrations in Portne Bay? As to the strength of the north, he invited the Premier to try it by sending two men to Bonavista to fill the offices of Messrs. Morison and Blandford. He was ready to resign.

As it was 6:30 the House adjourned and met again at 8 o'clock, when Mr. Coaker continued his argument on the strength and influence of the P. E. U. throughout the north.

Mr. Higgins took up the milk question and put himself forward as champion of farmers and other milk vendors. He had been pained by attacks made on him by the Advocate and did not think Mr. Coaker was the only victim. He had nothing against the P. E. U. He had been patted on the back by his election for St. John's East, and as Mr. Coaker had offered to resign from Bonavista to meet Messrs. Morison or Blandford there again, he extended the lists by offering to resign to meet him in St. John's East.

Mr. Thorsor was the next speaker, and said he had not reflected upon any member of the Government side as referred to by Mr. Moulton. He gave humorous instances of some of the lavish expenditures of the Government and made many witty hits. The Government appeared to be very pure. It refused to admit it had a beam in its eye. But it did not mind having a spar in its eye. He chafed Mr. Higgins on his affected love for the P. E. U. and his speech was keenly relished.

Mr. Targett repudiated the obloquy which had been hurled at Union men since the House opened. If they were suspicious of the Government they had good ground to be so and he instanced some extravagance and waste that he had come across in Trinity Bay.

Mr. Stone declared the Union would stand the charge that had been hurled at them by Government members were without forceful objection. They were there to criticize and criticize they would. The acts of the Government justified all and more than had been said against them.

Messrs. Abbott, Hayward, the Premier and Grimes were the last speakers before the committee rose. Mr. Abbott defended the formation of the Union and its organization as a political party. The Union was following the footsteps of labor in New Zealand, Australia and England. Mr. Abbott delivered a polished speech with commendable literary finish and delivered a surprise to all present in the House. With perseverance and practice he will go far in oratory.

The report of the C.H.E. for 1913 was tabled by the Colonial Secretary. Notice of a bill to regulate the season when wild fruit may be gathered in the country was given by the Premier.

Several members of the Opposition gave notice of a question after which the House adjourned until Monday afternoon.
