Bolshevism Proclaimed.

(From the Morning Chronicle.) From the beginning of the Winnipeg strike, and even before, it has been a matter not of suspicion, but of certainty that some at least of those directing it had Bolshevistic and not industrial ends in view.

Their aim was not to improve the conditions of labor, and so benefit the community, but to overthrow established institutions and thus produce anarchy, from which they hoped to reap personal advantage. It was unnecessary that discovery should be made of the literature which they had printed, and were prepared to issue had they been more successful, to prove this.

The Winnipeg strikers have not only their personal leaders and mouthpieces, but they have an official organ. On May 16th, the day after the strike began, the organ referred to, called "The Labor News," published the following editorial manifesto:

"The fight is on. It overthrew the Governments in Russia, Austria and Germany. Now it has Winnipeg in its grip. We shall fight until we win."

This declaration should be kept constantly before the eyes of the people of Canada, and duly impressed on their minds. There is no anguity about its phrasology. It is an open, offensive affirmation of Bolshevist principles and Bolshevist intentions. There can be no possible misunderstanding of it. No language could be more insolently belligerent and revolutionary.

It opens with an announcement of rebellion and violence. It does not even make a pretence of concealment. "The fight is on," it says, terse and imperiously. A struggle with regard to working terms and conditions between workmen and their employers is not a "fight." It has never been so regarded. It is an attempt to secure readjustment. It merely marks a crisis in negotiations. The hope always is that it will end in a speedy settlement. But that was not what the Winnipeg Bolshevists were seeking.
Far from it. They had radically different designs. They gloated over the idea that "the fight" was on, with power in their hands, as they supposed, to accomplish their purposes and impose their will upon the rest of the community, and speedily extend it over all Canada.

A good spanking will be given John and Harold Copeland and Alfred Lovatt who set fire to a pile of lumber which cost the owners $350 at Newmarket, Ont., recently. Major Brunton, in the County Police Court, gave the parents sterling advice.

Impressive Ceremony.

4th C. M. R. Battle Standards Laid on Altar of St. James's.

Toronto, June 11.—As the triumphant strains of the Te Deum swept through the great church the colors of the 11th Canadian Mounted Rifles were laid upon the communion table of St. James's Cathedral, while the guard of honor stood with fixed bayonets and the Rector pronounced the solemn words of dedication.

"Almighty Father, who dost ever call Thy people to faith and sacrifice, accept, we beseech Thee, these offerings, the emblems of loyalty and unselfish devotion, to the glory of Thy great name; through Jesus Christ our Lord."

Mediaeval Scene.

It is an impressive ceremony and as carried out at St. James's Cathedral it lost nothing of its old-world romance and historic significance. Long shafts of sunlight falling obliquely through the east windows served to accentuate the shadowy coolness of the high arches and as the main doors were swung open to the sword hilt of Lieut.
Col. Patterson, the officer in command, and the color party was greeted on the threshold by the Rector, there was a touch of the mediaeval in the spectacle which swept the spectator back into an age far remote from that of clanging street car gongs and ran-cous motor horns, the sounds of which coming, half muffled by distance, furnished the one discordant note in the proceedings.

In the stately formula prescribed for the occasion the commanding officer demanded admittance, asking sanctuary for the colors of his regiment, and this being accorded, he and his staff entered, followed by the standard bearers. The two banners were then placed in the hands of Dr.

D. Campbell Myers and Mr. Campbell Humphries, church wardens, and led by the clergy the procession passed up the centre aisle to the chancel rail, while the choir sang "Onward, Christian Soldiers."

Rector Receives Colors.

Here the commanding officer presented his request that the colors be received by the church for safe keeping, and as the order "Present arms!" echoed through the church and the guard of honor swept up their bayo-netted rifles to the position of salute, the standards were placed in the hands of the Rector, who with the words of dedication quoted above, placed them on the communion table while the organ burst into strains of the national anthem, which was followed by that psalm of thanksgiving and triumph, the Te Deum.

Thus ended the ceremonial of depositing the colors. Following this the choir sang the anthem: "God is a Spirit, and they that worship Him must worship Him in spirit and in truth, for the Father seeketh such to worship Him." A short address was then delivered by Rev. F. J. Moore, late chaplain of the 38th Battalion, 3rd Brigade, France, and senior chaplain Woodroffe Park Convalescent Hospital.

Seated at the front of the church were occupied by the color party, guard of honor and members of the battalion, including many who had been invalided home early in the war, and who wore mufti. The commanding officer sat with the Lieut-Governor, Sir John Hendrie, in the front pew on the left of the centre aisle.
Seated at the rear of the church were occupied by the bandsmen.

Meets Man-Eating Savages.

Rex Beach, broad shouldered and ruddy, is back in the tame precincts of New York after weeks of adventure amid settings as remarkable and exciting as any portrayed in the Beach novels of the northland. From the Yukon to the west coast of Mexico is a long way. But the deepest instinct of the explorer is curiosity, and Rex Beach, novelist, explorer and motion picture producer, has never ceased to venture where adventure and the expectation of strange events lead him. Now in New York, where he will spend several months preparing the adaptation and continuity for his next super-picture, he looks back on his Mexican adventures as the most interesting of his recent career.

"You will say that the man-eater doesn't exist in America," he told his interviewer, who looked with amazement at the smiling and calm Rex Beach who sat across from him.
"But I can take you into a lonely country where for miles and miles the only human companionship you can find is the intimacy—and I call it intimacy—of a forgotten people who still cling to cannibalism. We look at Mexico as an unkempt land, rather careless of its civilization, but still more or less open-faced and discovered to the world. Yet off in one corner of the western coast of the republic to the south is an ancient civilization, so sparse and meagre that it can hardly be called a civilization. It is rather a savagery, for the people who live there know scarcely anything of the great world revolving near them, and astonishingly still cling to the practice of eating their own kind."

"I wonder if you would believe some of the things I saw down there near Tiburón Island. It is a strange and lonely country, as strange as the people who inhabit it. They say that newspaper men who have gone into Mexico to verify for themselves all the tales they have heard of the recently discovered Seri Indians have never come back. It isn't exactly a pleasant thought, but I have no doubt after all I saw and heard that their bones line cold and gray to the open sky in the Seri country, after an end that must have been terrible for them as well as unpleasant to dwell on.

"It is no unusual thing to travel across Mexico now with an armoured car both fore and aft. In some way guns have found their way into the hands of these grim savages, and where the Seri dwells in a small country there are hundreds and hundreds of Mexican miles that pay tribute only to the Yaquis, who plunder and kill without restraint. But the Yaqui is after all an Indian as we know him—the Seri isn't. One day in our wanderings through the country, we came upon a band of them, ferocious, unpleasant men, and I can tell you it was only by a wholesale show of force on our part that we avoided trouble with them."

Much of the Mexican material gathered in his recent trip the famous novelist expects to use soon in a powerful new picture, the details of which are still in process of formation in his mind.—Vancouver Sun.

PEACE SOUP.

We made a cal-dron full of soup, and set the same
before the Huns;
they raised a loud, disgusted whoop, and a d reached around for hidden guns.
"Ach, donnerwetter!" said their chief, "we do not like this consumme; it is not made of wholesome beef, but rather hints of Old Dog Tray. I fear you've boiled a lot of crows, or made a broth of our lost goat; it is offensive to the nose, and raises blisters on the throat." The sparkling soup we have prepared is pushed aside with angry snort; and swords and sabres would be bared, if Huns had weapons of the sort. The Germans have no gratitude, they know not when they are treated well; they clamor now for oysters stewed, or peradventure, on the shell. We who by Germans have been gored, now lead them kindly to our coop, and seat them at the groaning board, and they rear up and cuss the soup. No tact or manners has the Teut, no winning ways, to gain a friend; he is a boor, a crude galoot, who robs us wrong ways to the end.
Divested of his war lord dreams, he came still haughty, to our town, and thought he ought to have ice cream, with costly drinks to wash it down.
He stirred up trouble in the past, he spread the grief on pretty thick; and while this weary world shall last I fear he'll play the same old trick.

A good way to use left-over fish is to pickle it with a dressing of diluted hot vinegar, seasoned with cloves, salt pepper and a bay leaf.
Serve on lettuce when cold.

Shaving reflects the saw-tooth edge that results from shaving and provides you with a keen edge for every shave.

Nursing Mothers!

When the supply of milk is deficient in quantity and poor in quality, "OVALTINE" will be found particularly beneficial. Not only does "OVALTINE" directly stimulate and ensure an adequate flow of milk, but it is also exceedingly nourishing and strengthening, thus helping the mother to stand the strain which nursing throws on the system. It is also advisable that "OVALTINE" should be regularly taken by the mother for a month or more before the birth; a rich store of strength and vitality is created and a good supply of milk ensured when the baby is born.

Old Robinson Crusoe Still a "Best Seller."

London, June 7.—London has just celebrated this week the 200th birthday of one of the most famous men in the world—none other than Old Robinson Crusoe.

ing sailor hero first saw the light of print on April 25, 1719, as a first installment in a dingy London paper, and now, according to W. Stally-bras, of the publishing house of Routledge, our old friend is, and continues to be one of the world's "best sellers."

"If I were starting a publishing business," said he, "the first book I'd get out would be Robinson Crusoe." One publishing house in England turns out each year eight editions, running to scores of thousands.

One of the picture papers has found and re-printed an old print of Dan Defoe in the stocks at Charing Cross.
Yes, he stood in the pillory of shame for a day, but admirers of Robinson Crusoe brought him drink and sweets and the luckless journalist did not have such a bad time of it after all.
