Empire Trade May Hurt United States

AMERICA WILL NOT PROTEST AGAINST MOVE UNLESS DIS-CRIMINATION SHOWN.

CHICAGO, Ills., Oct. 81.—(A.P.)—
"We cannot take exception to such measures as the imperial preference programme, whereby Great Britain is endeavoring to weld the British Empire into a stronger unit, unless, of course, there be some specific discrimination against United States merchandise as compared with that from other foreign countries. The only effective answer to such a programme can be found through the achievement of admitted superiority on the part of our wares in quality of price or service."

Such was the advice given members of the National Association of Farm Equipment Manufacturers in session here to-day by Dr. Julius Klein, Director of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic commerce of the United States Department of Commerce. Dr. Klein had previously expressed confidence in the future of United States foreign trade and forecasted that exports to Europe from the United States this year would approximate $2,700.000,000.

$2,700,000,000.

Dr. Klein told the delegates that it was quite impossible to correlate purchasing with patriotism and declared "such artificial devices as preference agreements do not seem to be entirely effective in blocking the normal currents of the day."

rents of our trade."

"For example," he said, "our prewar shares of Australia's imports was about 12 per cent. That figure, according to latest tabulations, is more than doubled now, standing close to 25 per cent. Meanwhile England's contribution to Australian purchases has fallen from 60 per cent. to 45 per cent."

Some of the difficulties ahead for the United States trade in Europe and Latin America he cited were: Restrictions on essential raw materials, still remaining from war-

Where the Axe May Fall TEN PER CENT. CUT IN STATE

TEN PER CENT. CUT IN STAT DEPARTMENTS.

The British Cabinet Economy Committee may favour imposing a compulsory 10 per cent. reduction in the administrative costs of Government Departments, leaving the heads of Departments to effect the saving as best they can.

Whether Ministers may ultimately be attracted by a scheme of all-round sacrifice, beginning with their own salaries and those of members of Parliament, remains to be seen, but such a plan is being advocated in some parts of Whitehall.

The substantial surplus, estimated a upwards of £50,000,000, now accumulated in the National Health Insurance Fund, may have an important effect on the proposals of the Economy Committee

Indeed, this surplus has suggested the possibility of withdrawing the percentage grant of two-ninths now contributed by the State at an annual cost to the taxpayer of between £6,000,000 and £7,000,000. An alternative proposal is that the many additional burdens which have been accepted by the State from time to time shouldnew be transferred to insurance organizations, with a small increase in the contributions of insured persons to meet the additional cost of medical and other benefits now borne by the

As regards expenditure on housing, this year estimated at £7,824,000, Ministers may consider whether the higher rate at which a subsidy is being given under the Wheatley Act as compared with hte Chamberlain Act—and the latter is producing a greater number of houses—is justifiable, especially as during last year over 67,000 working-class houses were erected without any financial assistance.

But the Government, in considering savings here, would bear in mind the effect on the house-building output.

The reform of the Poor Law, abolition of boards of guardians, and

Treasury control over the amount of grants from part of the Government's legislative programme, and it is heped to pass legislation to this end during next year.

Fire Worship

The religion of fire worship, calle Zoroastrianism, is a survival of faith of great antiquity. It flourishe during the fourth and sixth centuris B.C., and its adherents have alway paid great reverence to the element aspecially fire.

The deviut Parsee engages in frequent daily prayer and worship, as when he worships turns his face some bright object. The name "fire worshipper" was popularized Moore's poem, "Lalla Bookh."

Recently worshippers at the Terple at Rangoon appealed against the decision of the Supreme Court Lower Burma to allow a wome Bella, born of a Christian father as a Parsee mother, to worship their pleading that her presence defiled the Temple and that they had to a consecrate it.

Bella had undergone the usual ninghts' washing by the priest, which constitutes initiation, and the Princouncil who heard the appeal decide that, as she was born of a Parsemother and had taken the usual cermonies which were sufficient to make a Zoroastrian, Bella was therefore entified to worship in the Tennie.
