WHERE THE BRILLIANT GIRLS GO.

Miss Fawcett's triumph in the mathematical tripos puts the crown on a long series of successes by lady students at Cambridge. There have now been lady "seniors" in all the important triposes (except law). Here is the list:

Moral Sciences Tripos—In 1880 Miss Jones was bracketed senior. In 1881 Miss Moberly was senior, and so in 1884 was Miss Hughes.

Historical Tripos—In 1886 Miss Rolleson (daughter of the late Oxford Professor of Zoology) was bracketed senior, and in 1887

Mediaval and Modern Languages Tripos
—Here there have been four lady seniors.
In 1886 two ladies and no men were placed in the first class. The ladies, who were placed in alphabetical order, were Miss Chamberlin and Miss Skeat (daughter of Professor Skeat). In 1887 Miss Hervey was senior, and in 1888 Miss Tuke (whose father is well known in connection with schemes of Irish emigration). Finally, there are three successes of Miss Ramsay in the Classical Tripos, 1887, and of Miss Fawcett in the Mathematical, 1890. Of these eleven lady seniors, two came from Girton, Miss Jones and Miss Ramsay, the rest from Newnham.

It is often asked what becomes of lady students when they leave college. A few particulars about some of these lady seniors may therefore be added. Miss Ramsay is now Mrs. Montague Butler, the wife of the Master of Trinity. Miss Moberly is a headmistress of the Tonbridge Wells High School for Girls. Miss Hughes is head of a training college at Cambridge. Miss Chamberlin is instructor in German at Bryn Mawr College, Philadelphia, and Miss Jones is Moral Science lecturer at Girton.
