Army Howard Finishes Third Semi-Finals of 200 Metres Race.

R. Hodgson, the star Canadian swimmer, captured the final of the 1,500 metres swimming, free style. J. Q. Hatfield, of England, was second, and hour before he gained strength enough Hardwick, of Australia, was third. In winning this event Hodgson broke three records. He covered 1,000 metres in 14 minutes 37 seconds, and the 1,500 metres in 22 minutes flat. This beats Taylor's Olympic record, made at London in 1908, by 2 minutes and 33 seconds. Hodgson continued, completing the mile in 23 minutes 34½ seconds. Hatfield, of Great Britain, and Hardwick, of Australia, were second and third respectively. The Germans, Hathe, Luetzow and

At the opening of tenth lap the order was Bonhag, Karlsson, Scott, Berna and Hutson. Americans' hopes of winning second place ran high, although the race belonged to any of the five runners. Dominion Premier Makes Statement at the Royal Colonial Institute Dinner.

London, July 10.-Premier Borden made a historic first speech tonight at a record-breaking gathering of the Royal Colonial Institute. The company numbered 270 representatives from every part of the empire.

Among those attending were: Sir James Bevan Edwards, who presided; the Duke of Argyle, Earl Brassey, Lord Strathcona, Earl Stanhope, Admiral Sir Nathaniel Bowden-Smith, Lord Cowdray, Earl Onslow, Rear Admiral Kingsmill, Sir Joseph Pope, Sir Charles Rose, Mr. Norton Griffiths, M. .The measured dignity of Mr. Borden's enunciation of Canadian policy deeply impressed the many British parliamentarians present, and when he pronounced emphatically that Canada stood for one King, one flag, one empire, one navy, the cheering was vociferous and long-continued. The applause was renewed when Mr. Borden added that no jot of Canada's dearly-won autonomy need be, or should be, sacrificed. Perhaps two of the most impressive passages speech were the tribute French-Canadian loyalty, immediately followed by a declaration that the supremacy of the navy on the seas is the very breath of the life of the British Empire. As regards both immediate co-operation to meet the present emergency and a permanent basis of partnership in defence, it was enough at the present to say, he added, that Canadian people came of races who had never failed to realize and act upon a deep sense of their responsibilities to the British pub-

Liberal Leader Makes a Strong Appeal to Temperance Conservatives to Abolish the Bar.

Belleville, July 10. — "We have Belleville, July 10. — "We have a unique opportunity in this Province today. In clear, ringing tones Mr. N. W. Rowell gave out this challenge to the people of Ontario today at a meeting of the Twentieth Century Liberal Club of Hastings. It was more than a challenge. It was a declaration of faith. "It matters little," said he, "whether Sir James Whitney abolishes the bar or I abolish the bar; the important issue is whether the bar shall

A Clear Speech

That the temperance programme of the Liberal leader is exciting more than passing interest was evidenced by the close attention given to his re marks. Mr. Rowell dealt extensively with the situation regarding licensed clubs, and left no doubt as to the meaning of his speech at London Owing to the limits of provincial jurisdiction, he said that any possible temperance reform would have to be less than prohibition. "By the abolition of the bar we mean the bar-room, the room behind the bar, the entire sale of liquor in hotels, complete divorcement of the sale liquor from the business of keeping house of public entertainment. (Hear, hear.) Recognized by law, the bar was a social institution. "By their fruits ye shall know them," he declared. "Conservatives are just as much interested in the future welfare of this Province as Liberals. Does the open bar improve the life in the town or in the country?"

A Voice—No!
"If you say yes, why don't come out and defend it with all your energy and power? If you say no, have the courage of your convictions; unite with me to wipe it out." (Applause.)

Deals With Clubs.

Dealing with the residue of the iquor traffic as represented by the clubs and shop licenses, Mr. Rowell referred to the controversy arising out of his London speech on July 1. "Sir James Whitney says I did not "Sir James Whitney says I did not say enough," asserted Mr. Rowell, having regard to the Prime Minister's interview. "Sir James did not see all I said, and what he did see was not an exact report. But he was careful not to quote all he did see. It would not have served his purpose to have done so. I will try and sat-isfy Sir James today by saying some-thing more about clubs." Bar and Club.

It was impracticable, Mr. Rowell went on, to make a distinction between the bar and the club, so the cement chicken house was torn off and lifted 40 feet and crashed against the side of a barn.

Robert Pope had remained in the barn that was unroofed to quiet the horses, and when the wind took the trees at present.

TO BE FORM port of this he quoted from the re-port of the license branch of the provincial secretary's department for 1911, at page 57, which showed the different classes of licenses issued from 1874 until 1910. The first licenses appearing under the class of clubs are for the year 1906, when 24 are noted. In the same report the provincial secretary is careful to explain an increase in the number of wholesale licenses by stating that by an amendment to the license act vholesale firms outside the province doing business within the province have been compelled to take out licenses. There was no suggestion in the report that any of the clubs had authority, prior to the issue of the licenses, to sell liquor. At the time of making his London speech Mr. Rowell believed that to be the case, and such information as he was able to obtain since confirmed that view.

Whitney Wrong.

The Prime Minister said that

The Prime Minister said that clubs which were in existence when came into power were acting charters "which gave them under charters the power to sell intoxicating liquor." Mr. Rowell had caused inquiry to be made at the provincial secretary's department, and while they had not completed their search, the officials of the department, at the time of inquiry, were unable to name any club the charter of which gave power to sell intoxicating liquor. In fact, so far as he could learn, the charters to which Sir James Whitney referred contained absolutely no reference to the sale of liquor.

There undoubtedly were clubs in existence before the present Government came into power which sup-plied their members with liquor, but apparently they stood in the same position as dining-cars on railway trains, which sell liquor although not authorized to do so by law.

authorized to do so by law.

"One of the most gratifying features of the situation is that the number of men, members of clubs, who have heartily indorsed our policy, many not because they think the club license an evil as our best clubs, are conducted but because clubs are conducted, but because ings, city medical health officer, clubs are conducted, but because told the local board of health they recognize the great evil of the yesterday, that, while the city open bar, and are willing to sacrifice open bar, and are willing to sacrifice what they consider their personal convenience for the public good.

The license law in force when the present Government came into power, and which still remained in force, prohibited any person selling liquor by wholesale or retail without a li-cense, and under the general interpretation of the act, "persons" would include a body corporate, which would be clubs.
Continuing, Mr. Rowell said, assuming that there were clubs which had been permitted to sell liquor when the Whitney Government came into office, the number of such clubs apparently was 24, the number during thirty-three years of Liberal rule. During the six years that the Whit-ney Administration had been in power additional club licenses had been granted making the total now 56.

HIGH SOUNDING BUT REASONABLE

Editorial Comment on Premier Borden's Navy Speech at London.

[Canadian Press.]

Brantford, July 11.—The Expositor today says that Premier Borden's declaration that the dominions must have some voice in the Empire's councils in issues of war or peace is highounding, but reasonable.

If, says the Expositor, the dominions are to contribute to the naval defence of the Empire, it involves a sacrifice of autonomy which is not called for under the Laurier plan of leaving each colony free to decide for itself whether or not it will participate in a war in which the mother country is involved. What the colonies will do when occasion necessitates was shown in the South African War, but it would be very awkward if the Mother Country could not engage in a war with some hill tribe of India without first securing the consent of all the self-governing colonies.

The Spectator. The Spectator.

Hamilton, July 11.—The Spectator editorially says in part today:

"There are," says Mr. Borden, "two considerations before us. The first touches the immediate gravity of existing conditions." Everyone must know what this means. There is danger at any moment of the outbreak of war between Great Britain and Germany and of a trial of strength between their respective navies in the North Sea. The only way in which Canada could effectively assist the Mother Country in such an event would be in the supplying of one or two Dreadnoughts to be absorbed by the imperial fleet. The time must come when Canada will equal the parent country in population and wealth. In proportion as she as-sumes the dignity and the responsibility of such a position, she must share the counsels not less than the defence of the erown. The American colonists used to say: "Millions for defence, but not a ent for tribute." We know how to improve upon that. We can render voluntary and cheerful tribute as a thank-offering. We can join in the burdens of imperial defence, after having been consulted in the decision for peace or war
