Reciprocity in War and in Peace.

Before the Oakville meeting it was said that the Liberal leaders would take their stand on a platform of one plank only, and that Unrestricted Reciprocity. That may have been the intention, but it has been found impossible to stick to it. Mr. Laurier did stick to this one plank pretty well while he was on his feet; but when it came to Sir Richard Cartwright's turn he spread himself over several. "And this will be found inevitable in time to come, as well as it has been in time past. The single plank is not wide enough for a political party to stand on and shake itself; that is somewhere about the truth of the matter. And so Sir Richard took freely what room he wanted on such unimpeachable planks as those of honest and economical government, which are always right, and with regard to which the practical question is—whether they are sincerely advocated or not?

Our advocates of the one plank are good at holding forth to us what Reciprocity did for the Canadian farmer before, and what they say it will do for him again. We desire to complete the story by recalling what was done for the farmer by war, which happened while Reciprocity was in force, and which in fairness ought to get credit for not a few of the extra dollars which in those days found their way into the Canadian farmer's pocket. We say: let's there be fair play.

Mr. Laurier and Sir Richard would have done more fairly towards their audience had both of them taken more pains to remind the people of the peculiar circumstances which prevailed during the twelve years—1854-66, during which the Elgin Reciprocity Treaty was in force. Let us supply the omission. The ink was not long dry on the treaty when, as a result mainly of the Crimean war, the price of wheat went higher than had been known before by the same generation of men. Well, that war came to an end at last, and the south of Russia again became an exporter of wheat, as before; but next something else operating in the same way had to turn up. And that was the American civil war, which greatly raised prices in Canada. The effect of the Crimean war was seen on the price of wheat, mostly, but that of the American war was seen on the prices of everything that Canadian farmers had to sell. And the American war, following only a very few years after the Crimean war, began to tell heavily on prices in 1861. It seems "nice" to say that, given several civilized communities together, the prosperity of one is, or ought to be, that of the whole; but the cold truth of the matter does not always agree with the poetry of it, let us say. To our neighbors, that civil war meant large loss, and high prices for necessaries which they had to buy; whereas, to Canadian farmers it meant ready sale at high prices for what they had to sell. We had the best end of the trade then, no doubt.

Observe how, in those days, the Canadian farmer had two very important happenings, first one, and then another, in his favor. The Crimean war gave him a big lift to begin with, and even, five years after that war was over, the price of wheat still kept up above a dollar—a fact which, in the opinion of many people, justified the view that the country was yet safe. Then a rise in prices of farmers' produce took place, 1861-1866—more general and more important than that which marked the Crimean war; and the benefit of these higher prices Canadian farmers got, so far as they had the stuff to sell. Well, this war, too, came to an end at last; there was a surrender made under an apple tree at Appomattox, one day, and after that there was no more fighting of armies in the field. But the effects, financial and commercial, of this vast war disturbance were not so quickly over. Ten years after the war was over, war prices were still "to the fore," and were still far from having come down to a specie basis. When the downcome did come at last, as it had to come, there was a big shrinkage in profits and in prices, and farmers had to suffer with the rest, if not more than the rest. And since then grain prices have kept on falling, until men scarcely know where the downcome is to end. Just of late the price of wheat seems to have again taken a turn; but observe how, for how many years back, it has weighed like lead in the market.

We are quite willing to admit that Canada was benefited by the old Reciprocity Treaty, more especially as during that time—1854-66—we were not nearly as well provided with ocean steamship lines and other transportation facilities of our own. In those days we did a great deal, perhaps the most, of our business with Europe through New York, chiefly because we had not the independent means of doing it for ourselves. Now, if you wish to get it rightly into your head what the former situation really was, and what so powerfully helped to make Reciprocity a good thing for Canada, while it lasted, please bear in mind these two important facts: That the opening part of the Reciprocity period was also the Crimean war period, when the price of wheat touched $2 in Canada, and actually went over it—$2.25 both in Toronto and Hamilton, we believe. Next, that the latter part of the Reciprocity period witnessed the great and durable range of high prices incident to the American war, and which took in everything that farmers had to sell. If you wish to estimate aright what Reciprocity did then for Canada you must take into account first, what the Crimean war did to raise prices for our farmers, and next what was done in the same way by the American civil war. Then perhaps you may place Reciprocity about where it belongs. But don't forget the wars, for they greatly affected the results to our farmers, we bee to say.

It will be no more than justice if, after all this, you should get hold of still another important fact. That not for the average lifetime of one or two generations, has the export price of grain run so low as it has in Canada during the last eight or ten years—since the N. P. has been upon trial. The fall in wheat prices in particular, has been an astonishment to American farmers as well as to Canadian. The N. P. had nothing to do with bringing it about; and it is not likely that Reciprocity would remedy the evil. If you ask how it is that the price of wheat has been going down in Western Europe these some years past, the ready answer is: because of increased supplies from India, Australia, South America and elsewhere. This also is something that did not make itself felt before; at least to nothing like the same degree. Consider well how farmers' prices were affected by war, from twenty to thirty years ago, also how new sources of wheat supply have turned up in this very present time, and you will admit that there has been other things in operation besides Reciprocity.

Remember the Crimean war; remember also that tremendous disturbance the American civil war, and you will admit that for a certain streak of prosperity which he once had, the Canadian farmer had something else besides Reciprocity to be thankful to.

The big raft of logs has made its way safely to or near New York, after a cruise of ten days from the Joggins, in Nova Scotia. It may give an idea of the bulk of this raft to mention that it is 892 feet long, shows fifteen feet above the water, and draws twenty-two feet. And so the trick has been done at last, after all that has been said about it.

Kant's Philosophy.

The Philosophy of Kant, as contained in Extracts from His Own Writings," is the style of a work just issued by the well-known publishing firm of James Maclehose & Sons, Glasgow. The author is Dr. John Watson, Professor of Moral Philosophy in the University of Queen's College, Kingston, Ont., who is known to philosophical students as the author of "Kant and His English Critics." The extracts selected and translated by the Professor are from Kant's four treatises, the Critique of Pure Reason, the Metaphysics of Morality, the Critique of Practical Reason and the Critique of Judgment. The work is well got-up and arranged, and possesses what is of great service, a complete index. All lovers and students of Kant's philosophy will welcome this book, and through its means many will doubtless be led to read the great philosopher's works for themselves.

A little nonsense now and then is relished by the wisest men, but it is really laughable to watch the feeble efforts of some puny dealers trying to compete with the Army and Navy who are to-day the acknowledged leaders in their line and they actually sell clothing retail for less than small dealers pay for the same goods. TALKS OF THE STRIKERS.

Progress of the Dispute in the Plumbers' Strike—Other Trade Matters.

The Master Plumbers' Association met in their offices, 16 Victoria-street last night. There was a large attendance. Encouraging reports were received from each employer. Ninety-one competent men are now at work for the members of the association. All jobs are getting on satisfactorily. Letters were read from the New York Plumbers Employers' Association offering to supply any number of steamfitters as soon as the Toronto employers require them. With reference to the complaint of some disappointed New York men that they did not get 30 cents per hour, the employers stated that it was clearly understood by every man engaged that only the best men would get that pay.

Gates, who is said to have signed the men's agreement, is not a member of the Master Plumbers Association, and has not hitherto been known as an employer as all. The employers wish to announce that whatever be the outcome of the dispute they will continue to employ all the competent men who have started for them during the trouble. They want nobody any more men, and can easily get all they require.

The Builder's Laborers Union had a special meeting in Temperance Hall last night, received a satisfactory report from Travelling Delegate Booth, admitted 18 new members, took $800 in contributions, voted $25 to the Plumbers' appeal case, and another $100 to the strike fund, with promises of further support if the strike continues. Messrs. T. Houghton, H. Benson and T. Webb were elected delegates to the Dominion Trades and Labor Congress at London.

The Lathers' Union had a large meeting in Simcoe-street Hall last night, enrolled six new members, voted a first gift of $25 to Brother George Yeoman, who is off work owing to injuries received through falling from the roof of a building on Yonge-street, and reiterated their determination to aid the plumbers by every means in their power.

The Ex-Premier's Little Joke.

Hon. Alexander Mackenzie appreciates President Cleveland's position as defined by the President himself: "One half of my time is taken up in listening to applications for office and the other half in listening to lies." The staunch old Liberal can understand and enjoy the difficulties of reigning politicians. "Why," said he the other day to a friend, "when I was at the helm it took me longer to listen to office-hunters than to run the Government. The ex-Premier tells a story of a man who came to him one day to apply for an office. He was 60 years old and the only reason he gave why he should get the office was that he was an orphan, to which the Premier replied that he could sympathize with his interviewer—he was an orphan himself.

A COMEDY OF ERRORS.

TORONTO AND TROY'S BURLESQUE ON THE DIAMOND YESTERDAY.

The Home Defeat the Stars—Other Games—Racing at Saratoga and Monmouth Park—Yeamans Will Row O'Connor—Imported Horses for Canada—Turf and Baseball Gossip.

Heavy hitting and loose fielding characterized yesterday's Toronto-Troy game. Haddock was in his box for the visitors and the champions found him for thirteen hits including six doubles and a triple. Shepherd pitched for the home teams and the Trojans seven hits included only one, Baker's double, for more than one run. Toronto took the lead as the start, Rickley's single, Burke's and Mansell's two-baggers and errors by Wright and Banning yielding three runs. In the same inning McLaughlin's fumble, and wild throws by McLaughlin, Keefe and Shepherd gave the visitors two. The lead thus obtained was increased in the fifth by two on Decker's two-bagger, a wild pitch and Haddock's wild throw. Five were added in the eighth and one in the ninth, while the visitors succeeded in scoring again only in the seventh when Burke's double and Sowdon's single gave them their only earned run. Mr. Brady made his first appearance here as an umpire and impartially but effectually roasted both players. The score:

CHAMPION TEEMER TALKS.

He is Waiting in New York to Make a Match with O'Connor.

NEW YORK, Aug. 14.—Champion Oarsman, John Teemer, who, with Albert Hamm, was defeated in double sculls, by Gaudaur, and McKay at Saratoga, is now in this city and will remain here for a week. Hamm is also here. Referring to the race of the double-scull championship Teemer said:

"Excuses for defeat are poor things from any man, but sometimes a man has good reasons for being beaten. With us there were several. We did not get our boat from the builder's shop until the day of our departure for Saratoga, and then we only rowed three times together before the race. That was insufficient practice, and we did not get into proper rowing form. Coupled with that, Hamm had grown stale from overwork and tired towards the finish. I was in great form, and you can easily recognize this when you consider that I easily defeated Gaudaur, Hamm and McKay in the slowest sculling race near Baltimore a couple of days ago.

"Keenan knows well enough that I did not sell the race and he will back me to row O'Connor, of Toronto, for $2,500 to $5,000 a side. Keenan said that he would not again back me to row double with any man, and I don't blame him. Moreover, I will not ask him or any other man to do so, as I intend to never again row double. Hereafter I will row single. I will row any man in the world for any sum of money and I repeat that I will have a match with O'Connor in a few days. I am waiting here for O'Connor or his backer, Joe Rosers. O'Connor challenged me and I accepted, so that now all that needs to be done is to meet and sign articles. If Joe doesn't come to terms soon, however, I will have to leave him alone, as I intend to go West this fall and may get as far as San Francisco. I anticipate rowing a match there with Peterson, who is said to have improved greatly. I will not go to Australia this year. Hanlan has another match with Kemp, and I will await the outcome of that. Hanlan may win back the world's championship, and if he does I will not need to go to Australia, but can row him here.

The O'Connor-Lee Race To-day.

The race will take place this afternoon over the Island course. All arrangements have been completed for the contest which will be rowed between five and six o'clock. Both oarsmen are in good condition and a capital race should result. Though it is thought to be a certainty for O'Connor, Lee's victory over Wilson will no doubt give him many friends. There will be no postponements as the referee will not wait for perfectly smooth water and the oarsmen will certainly be called out between the hours mentioned.

Rowing at Port Sandfield.

A regatta was held at Port Sandfield, Muskoka, on Saturday last, guests of the Prospect House and adjacent islands taking part in it. The winners:

The open double scull race was won by G. Ward, (stroke) and A. Cawley (bow). Prize, Mr. Gray and J. Mont. Lowndes second. There were eight starters.

The ladies' double scull race was won by Miss Louie Wood (stroke), and Miss Ella Morrison (bow). Miss B. Roach and Miss Annie Gifford were second.

The double open canoe race was won by Fred H. Gray and J. Mont. Lowndes, C. B. Lowndes and E. Cox second. There were five starters in the ladies' single scull race, and Mrs. Arthur Hill was the winner, Miss S. Roach second.

Eleven competed in the open single scull race for a gold medal presented by Mrs. Duffield, and J. Mont. Lowndes was the winner, E. Simpson second.

Colley was the lucky winner of the sub rage, A. Martin second.

The regatta was in every way a success.

RACING NEWS FROM LONG BRANCH.

Willie Martin's Narrow Escape—Several Valuable Horses Break Down.

LONG BRANCH, N. Y., Aug. 14.—Willie Martin, Mr. Gratz's clever Canadian jockey, who rod Elkwood when he won the Suburban Handicap last June, had a narrow escape from death at Monmouth Park yesterday morning. He came from Saratoga on Friday to ride Mr. Wither's Cyclone colt in the Junior Champion Stakes on Saturday, and early this morning, at Trainer Hanrahan's request, mounted the two-year-old half brother to Lagrard, by Tom Cobittree, out of Dawdle, and galloped him in company with Stonecrop. As the pair were running through the stretch at full speed, the Dawdle colt in front, Sam Brown's Inverculd colt, that had been grazing in the inner field, broke away from the boy in charge, and galloped up the stretch like a wild horse. He almost ran into the Withers pair. The Dawdle colt swerved suddenly, and Martin was thrown on his face directly in front of Stonecrop. Every body expected he would be trampled upon, but the boy on Stonecrop reined her in just in time to avert the disaster. Stonecrop, however, wrenched her back and left shoulder in her efforts to stop short as her rider's command, and she will probably never run again.

Is there a bane upon the California thoroughbreds? It would seem so. First Porter Ashe loses Tribulet, then Matt Storms has to destroy Grover Cleveland, his great horse, for which he had mapped out a great career in the stud in his native State, and now comes the news that both Sariuam and True Briton of Senator Hearst's string have broken down.

Proctor Knott's wonderful race for the Junior Champion Stakes on Saturday was the general topic of conversation yesterday wherever horsemen congregated. It was the almost unanimous expression that Sam Bryant has one of the best youngsters ever bred in America in the big chestnut gelding.

Junior Champions have rarely done well, as the misfortunes of Ban Fox, Tremont, and Kingfish testify. The former never won but one race after his sensational championship.

Tremont, the Dwyers' unbeaten phenomenon, never ran as a three-year-old, owing to defective feet, and he is now in the stud. Kingfish, that won it for the Dwyers last year, died soon afterward, and it remains to be seen whether Proctor Knott can escape calamity and stop the procession of ill luck. Bryant & Scoggan expect to win the Coney Island Futurity at Sheepshead Bay on Labor Day with him, and should he carry off that honor his owners could very well afford to retire him if he never started again, as the Junior Champion and Futurity combined will be worth about $70,000—a very tidy sum for one colt to earn in two races.

Whethers, whose Faverdale colt ran second to Proctor Knott on Saturday, talks as though he would not be averse to matching the Faverdale or Dawdle colt against the Western wonder, he not being satisfied with the outcome of the championship.

Firenzi can undoubtedly make a new record at a mile and a half whenever called upon to do so. The Monmouth Park Association should give the grand little mare an opportunity by offering a handsome sum for the achievement of such a wonderful feat.

Gossip of the Turf.

Harry Cooper, with Mclaughlin in the saddle, started in a heavy welter weight race at Gutatoga on Monday. The distance was three-quarters of a mile, and rounding the turn his girstle broke and McLaughlin was obliged to pull him up. Several Canadians who witnessed the race say he would have won had the accident not occurred.

The Melbourne Stable has dispensed with the services of A. McCarthy. He expects to ride for Mr. Withers, provided that precipitate papers from Mr. Barnes, which he has not yet obtained.

Another contest between Clingstone and Belle Hamlin had been arranged to be trotted at the West
